25,000 See Red Sox Beat Nats, 5-0, in Opener Here

Red Sox Pounce on Four Hurlers for 16 Hits; Welch Gives 5.

Stewart Hauls In Roosevelt's Toss

Pomp and Dignity Mark Pre-Game Ceremony; Werber Bat Star.

By Shirley L. Povich
(Sports Editor of The Post).

Into each life some rain must fall, as Socrates, or somebody advised us, and it fell in gobs into the lives of the Nats and 25,000 Washington fans at Griffith Stadium yesterday, where the Washington Club was decisively dunked by the Boston Red Sox, 5 to 0, in the Capital's opening game of the season.

Rain, or something, got into the eyes of the Nats' batting attack, or it might have been Boston Pitcher Johnny Welch. Any way, the Washington club that led the league in hitting last year made only five hits off young Mr. Welch before, after and between raindrops.

It started raining rain and then it started raining Boston base hits along about the middle of the game and although the heavens relented, the Boston batters didn't and 16 solid socks bounced off the Boston bats, which explains in a great measure the sorry afternoon of the four Washington pitchers.

Pomp and Dignity.

But this was the inaugural game, fairly reeking with swank and Presidential pomp and dignity and the ceremonies opening to the strains of the ultra ultra United States Army Band. I would tell you about that.

Promptly at 2:45 the White House automobile nosed its way onto the playing field to discharge the Chief Executive in a field box abaft the Washington dugout while Washington fandom once again stiffened to the strains of "Hail to the Chief."

A wave of the Presidential hat as Mr. Roosevelt alighted from his open car drew prolonged applause from the assemblage and once the President took his seat matters moved swiftly, with Vice President Garner, Owner Clark Griffith of the Washington club, and Chief Salu-

U. S. Relief Aid Beaten by Mob

150 Jobless Men, Women Attack Official After He Hurls Bomb.

Pittsburg, Kans., April 24 (AP).—A crowd of 150 unemployed men and women stormed the Red Cross-Federal Relief headquarters here today and severely beat William A. Beasley, Crawford County commissioner, after he had released a tear gas bomb.

As a result, John G. Stutz, executive secretary of the Federal emergency relief committee for Kansas, announced at Topeka that Federal relief funds would be withheld from the county "until we are convinced absolutely the county authorities have the matter under control."

Beasley was knocked unconscious and taken to a hospital.

When the crowd arrived after forcing cessation of work at the municipal airport by men on relief tasks, Beasley suggested that a committee of three be named to discuss the delegation's complaints, including demands for more clothing.

The spokesman went outside and upon his return a large group of protestors rushed in after him. Witnesses said Beasley warned them to stand back and then released a tear gas bomb when they continued to advance. The men pressed through the stifling gas and beat the commissioner with their fists.

Hangar Flattened During Windstorm

Five Beacon Field Planes Also Damaged.

A southwest wind bearing rain that whipped through the District at 27 miles an hour yesterday flattened a hangar at Beacon Field, 3 miles south of Alexandria, damaging five planes.

Richard Henry, assistant manager of the field, escaped injury by diving under a plane when the hangar was demolished. Damage to the structure was estimated at $2,000 and $500 to the planes.

The planes belonged to Arthur Godfrey, radio announcer; Ralph Bangs, Earl Mays, Gilbert Randolph and Reginald Shrader, all of Washington.

District Works Loan Blocked By Park Board

Demand for $2,000,000 Fund Brings Storm of Criticism.

Insistence of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission that nothing must interfere with its program of park land buying yesterday prevented immediate favorable action on the $20,000,000 District public works bill and brought down the heaviest storm of criticism representatives of the commission ever have heard from District officials and residents and members of the House and Senate District Committees.

The public works bill provides for construction of a tuberculosis hospital, an addition to Gallinger Hospital, construction of a sewage and refuse disposal plant, addition to public school facilities and a wall or prison for confining long-term prisoners at Lorton, Va., and an additional $2,.00,000 for park land buying.

Representatives of the Park and Planning Commission insisted that they be given $2,000,000 of the $20,000,000 it is proposed to get from the Public Works Administration but they insisted as strongly that nothing be done which might in the future retard park purchases under the Capper-Cramton act, which requires repayment of Government advances for park purchases at the rate of $1,000,000 a year.

Term Cost Too High.

District Commissioners Melvin C. Hazen and George E. Allen, Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor and budget officer, and E. Barrett Prettyman, corporation counsel, insisted that the District could not bear the financial burden of repaying park appropriations at the rate of $1,000,000 a year plus an additional $1,000,000 to repay the CWA advance.

Inability of the Commissioners and the park representatives to

Injunction Halts Milk Price Increase Order

New York, April 24 (AP).—Supreme Court Justice Aaron J. Levy today granted the application of the city and the New York Post, Inc., for a temporary injunction restraining the State milk control board from increasing the price of milk 1 cent in New York City.

The court set the case, in which a permanent injunction is sought, for hearing within two weeks.

Death's Secret Nearly Solved By Use of Dog

Berkeley, Calif., April 24 (AP). Like an anxious father, Dr. Robert Cornish watched today over a mongrel dog which he hopes to completely restore to life in his unique experiments to unlock the secret of death.

The dog—put to death clinically 11 days ago and brought back to a semblance of life—still is unconscious and so far has shown no intelligence, said the University of California research professor.

"He exhibits physical reactions, such as twitching his ear when a fly lights on it, and blinking his eyes when a light is flashed," Dr. Cornish explained. "But whether the experiment to restore complete consciousness will be successful I can not say at this time.

Gaining Strength.

"Of course it may not recover, but it seems to have gained strength since we began feeding it bits of solid liver instead of liquid food.

"We are hopeful that the brain cells may be restored and it will return to consciousness, but if it does finally recover it probably will take a long time."

New York, April 24 (AP).—Arthur W. Morse, Wall Street broker, today was sentenced to a prison term of 8 to 20 years on his plea of guilty to manslaughter in the first degree in connection with the death of Mrs. Edna Field Leavett, formerly of Brookline, Mass.

Mrs. Leavett was found unconscious on the floor in Morse's MacDougal alley apartment in Greenwich Village March 13 last. Police learned the couple had quarreled after a round of Village night clubs.

Army-Navy 'Red Revolt Plot' Claimed in West

Sacramento, Calif., April 24 (AP). Clarence S. Morrill, chief of the State bureau of criminal identification and investigation, said today evidence in his hands links Communists with a plot to foment mutiny in the United States Army and Navy and the California National Guard as a step in a projected American revolution.

The plot, he stated, includes an elaborately developed plan for contacting the service men through relatives and friends in an effort to enlist them in the Communist movement.

Jake the Barber's Jail Now Jail in Reality

Chicago, April 24 (AP).—John Factor was evicted from his hotel-room jail today and removed to a cell in the Dekalb County Jail at Sycamore, Ill., to await extradition to England for trial on $7,000,000 fraud charges.

Woman Draws Gun, Catches Kidnaper and Frees Victim

Fort Worth, Tex., April 24 (AP).—Charles M. Kella, jr., of Fort Worth, was rescued from three kidnapers this afternoon by a woman filling station attendant who drew a pistol when she became suspicious of the trio, who stopped for gasoline.

The men drove up to a station in Winfield, Tex., and offered to trade a pistol for gasoline.

The woman, whose name was not learned immediately, drew her gun.

Two of the men fled into the woods nearby and one surrendered. The woman heard a noise in the rumble seat of the car. There she found Kella, who said he had been imprisoned in the rumble seat since late Monday.

A second man was captured later by officers. The third man was reported surrounded near Winfield by a posse of citizens and officers.

Tugwell Given Higher Post By Roosevelt

New Deal Army Laughs as Critics See "Brains Truster" Promoted.

By Raymond Clapper.

President Roosevelt has given a vote of confidence to his No. 1 Braintruster, Dr. Rexford G. Tugwell, by promoting him to a new post as Undersecretary of Agriculture.

It is a new job just created by Congress, after considerable controversy, and carries an increase in salary but no immunity from the brickbats which went with his job of first assistant secretary. The main purpose of the new post is to provide Dr. Tugwell with a more ample salary, for he has been receiving less than he did as an economics professor at Columbia University.

A chuckle rippled through the New Deal army yesterday when it turned out that the only net result to date of the heavy bombardment which was turned on Dr. Tugwell during the Wirt incident was a promotion and an increase in pay for the star professor of the Roosevelt Administration.

Although the Administration had Dr. Tugwell in mind when it asked Congress to create the new post of undersecetary, President Roosevelt held back the nomination and dispatched it to the Senate at a time when it would serve as a gesture of confidence in the man who, since the departure of Prof. Ray Moley, has borne the brunt of the attack on the New Deal.

Fireworks May Be Staged.

Republican senatorial leaders expected the nomination would be confirmed but they conferred yesterday afternoon as to whether they should seize the opportunity to discuss the Administration philoso-

Bank Loss in $200,000 Holdup Cut to $25,000

Independence, Kans., April 24 (U.P.). The Independence State Bank today had marked down to $25,000 the cost of a desperate $200,000 robbery here last January 31 by a simple business transaction in which the loot was bought back from the robbers.

L. C. Boys, president of the bank, confined his revelation of the negotiations to a simple announcement that all the $200,000 bonds and securities taken in the robbery had been recovered.

Author Cooper Blames Women for Dillinger

Philadelphia, April 24 (U.P.).—Women are responsible for John Dillinger's misdeeds, according to Courtney Cooper, author.

"Some unscrupulous woman helped Dillinger to escape," he said. "She is more dangerous to society than the desperado himself. It is she and her kind who make him seek a life of crime. Catch the woman who has cheeredD llinger in a career of murder, and you will catch Dillinger."

5,000 Police Closing In On Dillinger

Dragnet's Meshes Spread to 5 States; Outlaw 'Seen' Everywhere.

Hidden Headquarters in Chicago Directing Wide Man Hunt.

Chicago, April 24 (AP).—Five thousand police officers in five States, all armed to the teeth, were heartened tonight with the word of Federal authorities that the end of John Dillinger's bloody trail was in sight.

Government men in charge of the man hunt reviewed their accomplishments in tracking Dillinger during the last week and declared it only a matter of days, perhaps hours, before the outlaw would be killed or captured—probably killed.

Telephone calls, telegrams and personal visits from citizens came at the rate of hundreds an hour to the anticrime directors of half a dozen cities reporting Dillinger to be here, there, everywhere—in Wisconsin, Minnesota, Indiana, Ohio, Illinois.

Reports, officially denied, persisted that 100 crack agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation were massing here to work from secret headquarters until Dillinger is captured or killed.

Maintain Secret Headquarters.

The Daily News said the purpose of the secret headquarters was to form a clearing house of Dillinger operations for the special Federal Dillinger squad.

From the scraps of information reaching them, authorities sifted out what they believed to be of value and deduced that Dillinger and two or more of his outlaws had reached Minnesota in the neighborhood of Minneapolis and St. Paul.

Another group of the seven Dillinger outlaws fleeing after northern Wisconsin gun battles that cost two lives were believed to have gone in the opposite direction. Watches were kept for them in Indiana, Ohio and Illinois.

"We've got more evidence to work on than ever before in hunting Dillinger," said Melvin H. Purvis, chief of the United States Bureau of Investigation here, "and we'll have him before long. His trail is getting broader every minute."

Included in the 5,000 officers under orders to shoot the fugitive on sight were National Guardsmen, sheriffs and their deputies, local authorities, State police and Federal agents.

One of the clews that Federal men considered of most value was a report that a maroon-colored Ford automobile carrying several men was seen speeding through Muncie, Ind., toward the East. The license numbers of the machine were the same as those for which St. Paul police had broadcast a warning.

A report from Muncie caused apprehension at Columbus, Ohio, where three of Dillinger's former pals—Harry Pierpont, Charles Makley and Russell Clark—were confined in the State Penitentiary upon conviction of murdering Sheriff Jess Sarber in freeing Dillinger from jail at Lima, Ohio.

May Try to Free Women.

Apprehension also arose at Madison, Wis., where three women of the Dillinger mob, captured after Sunday night's battle near Mercer, Wis., were held. At St. Paul, it was feared Dillinger might attempt to free another of his friends, Miss Evelyn Frechette, charged at St. Paul with harboring him weeks ago.

Pardon Forgotten, Dillinger's Town Asks Guardsmen

Mooresville, Ind., April 24 (U.P.).—The town board of the little Indiana community where John Dillinger was reared sent a petition today to Gov. Paul V. McNutt asking that National Guardsmen be sent here to protect citizens from the outlaw.

Only a week ago, a group of citizens here signed a petition to the Governor asking that Dillinger be pardoned if captured.

That petition brought criticisms from law enforcement officials.

The four fled empty-handed after a gun battle with the cashier, J. C. Weber, who took refuge behind a bullet-proof glass cage.

Evolution of Nation Without 'Revolution' Is Aim of Roosevelt

Tokyo's Envoy Called On Japanese Warning

Explanation of "Restatement" of China Policy Given State Department by Saito; Action Follows British Move.

By Kendall Foss.

The United States officially took notice of Japan's new "white hands off Asia" policy yesterday when Acting Secretary of State William Phillips sent for the Japanese Ambassador, Hirosi Saito, and conferred with him for 15 minutes.

The action followed closely on reports from London the British Government had politely reminded Japan the Nine-Power Treaty was still in force.

Upon leaving Phillips' office, Saito declared he had left no official communication. He told newspapermen he had shown the Acting Secretary some Japanese newspaper clippings containing the text of the "restatement and clarification" of policy made in Tokyo a week ago.

Phillips declined to comment on the meeting. It was believed further developments might be forthcoming today.

The cloak of silence which descended upon the department a week ago when the first reports from Tokyo of a new and aggressive sounding policy arrived remained unbroken yesterday. But intense study of all angles and possibilities continued.

The summoning of Saito indicates some decision as to policy may have been reached; the briefness of the

Amnesty Bill Signed, Spain Unrest Grows

5,000 Political Captives Freed Today; Strike Wave Spreads.

Madrid, April 24 (AP).—A strike wave neared alarming proportions throughout Spain tonight, the eve of the scheduled release of more than 5,000 political prisoners.

After days of deliberation, President Alcala Zamora today avoided resignation of the cabinet by signing an amnesty bill, effective tomorrow.

Reaction to his step was awaited nervously by the government.

Several general strikes had been provoked by prospect of the amnesty approval and more were threatened when Zamora finally acted. Madrid extremist ranks were restless and disorders were predicted.

Although ministers were silent regarding their plans, it was reported from sources close to the government that a state of alarm or even martial law would be declared if the situation increased in seriousness.

Government spokesmen said a plan had been prepared to handle any eventualities.

There was rejoicing in jails and prisons throughout Spain as word spread that Zamora had signed the long-agitated amnesty decree.

Nazi Absorption Threat To Catholicism Hinted

Weimar, Germany, April 24 (U.P.). A hint that a Nazi effort will be made to absorb the Catholic Church in Germany was given by Bishop Sasse, of Eisennach, in an address to a meeting of Weimar German Christians today.

"As long as two confessional pillars exist in Germany, the people can not talk of church unity," he said.

Senators Find Silver Holder List Is Vague

Morgenthau Sends First Section; Senate May Make Own Survey.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau's first list of silver hoarders, sent to the Senate yesterday, appeared to be pretty much of a puzzle, so far as it reflected any light on who is in a position to profit from any enhancement of the price of the white metal.

This list appeared to show that two men who were reported to be among the hosts Monday night at a dinner to the silver bloc in Congress were associated with companies that held slight holdings. It showed that several banks, industrial enterprises, realty companies and individuals have been dealing in large amounts of silver.

An international flavor was given to the list wh , the names of several titled Parisians were recorded as holding comparatively small quantities of silver. But several of these were unknown while in the case of the Countess de Janze it was not clear whether the person meant was the former widow of a New York Representative or Count de Janze's first wife whom he divorced after she shot the son of an English knight.

Interest had been aroused by this list, the first of a series tabulated from a survey which Secretary Morgenthau several weeks ago said indicated that not all advocates of silver legislation were "disinterested." But on its face this list was inclusive. Even figures for large silver holdings were misleading because in some cases they

New Deal Expenditures Criticized as Too Small

Chattanooga, April 24 (AP).—"The trouble with the Roosevelt program of public expenditures," former Gov. Phillip F. La Follette of Wisconsin said today, "is that it is too small."

Here for an address to the Tennessee Valley Institute tonight, La Follette said that if the total public expenditures of the National Administration were compared with total private and Governmental expenditures of previous years they would be found to be "very small."

City-Wide Ban on All-Night Parking May Be Ordered Soon

Protests of merchants notwithstanding, William A. Van Duzer, director of traffic, said last night that the parking ban on F, G and Seventh streets would be continued for 30 days as ordered by the District Commissioners.

The traffic director also announced a survey preliminary to recommendation of elimination of all-night parking throughout the city. He also expressed himself as favoring abolition of day parking on boulevards, arterial highways and on all thoroughfares used by street cars.

A survey has revealed that 86 per cent of the city's automobiles can be parked in available garages, Mr. Van Duzer said. He is sending questionnaires to citizens' associations to ascertain the garage space in their respective communities. The associations will be asked to give their views.

Washington, the traffic director said, is one of the few cities in which all-night parking is allowed.

Parking space in various precincts determined by the Traffic Department's survey follows: No. 1, 88 per cent; No. 2, 45 per cent; No. 3, 38 per cent; No. 4, 106 per cent; No. 5, 113 per cent; No. 6, 119 per cent; No. 7, 96.9 per cent; No. 8, 111 per cent; No. 9, 69.3 per cent; No. 10, 63.1 per cent, and No. 11, 134 per cent.

The traffic problem in the downtown area can be solved only through the elimination of all parking, Mr. Van Duzer said. Inspector Benjamin F. Lamb of the Traffic Bureau voiced a similar opinion.

A survey has revealed that 86 per cent of the city's automobiles can be parked in available garages, Mr. Van Duzer said. He is sending questionnaires to citizens' associations to ascertain the garage space in their respective communities. The associations will be asked to give their views.

Washington, the traffic director said, is one of the few cities in which all-night parking is allowed.

Reaction of merchants to the traffic director's views will be voiced at a meeting of trade organization heads at 10 a. m. today at the Board of Trade headquarters. Of 45 merchants questioned 41 have said that parking ban is damaging their business.

An alternative plan will be drawn by the merchants today for presentation to the District Commissioners.

National Planning, Not Legislative Panacea Hope, He Says.

Backs Subsistence Homestead Plan

Gray Matter Rules, He Avers, Brain Trust or Otherwise.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

Enunciating his hope in National planning rather than "legislative panaceas," President Roosevelt yesterday defined his Administration as one of "evolution, not revolution," in an impromptu speech reflecting much of the philosophy behind the New Deal.

"By using gray matter—Brain Trust or otherwise," he remarked slyly, apropos of Dr. William A. Wirt and other recent critics, the Administration intends to push forward its experiments with subsistence homesteads.

"We want evolution. When you hear talk of revolution there's one letter too many in that word," he said.

The subsistence homesteads, a target for much criticism as projects tending to socialism or communism, he indorsed at the opening of his address as "my own pet children." His travels have convinced him, he continued, that the time is "overripe" for such planning in a Nation that developed "haphazardly."

From the general subject of homesteads, by which the Administration hopes to wean stranded populations and "little pockets of humanity" away from a futile livelihood to more generous environment, the President branched off into other fields for comment. He was speaking extemporaneously at a special preview of the homestead exhibition in the Department of Commerce Building.

Strikes at Panaceas.

"I don't see why there isn't a greater enthusiasm for planning," Mr. Roosevelt told his audience, which included many members of Congress. "We seem to be more apt to favor panaceas, the suggested legislation that they tell us will cure anything in 30 days."

This was taken as an indirect answer to the agitation for silver inflation which, as the Administration's gold experiment before it, has been hailed as a legislative "cure-all" for depression. Likewise, the President referred to charges of "regimentation" in the homesteads, with:

"None will be forced to move anywhere or change their work

Insull Suffers Heart Attack

Stricken While Ship Is at Dock in Morocco, but Recovers Quickly.

S. S. Exilona, at Casablanca, Morocco, April 24 (AP).—Samuel Insull suffered a light heart attack tonight while chatting in the ship's salon. He recovered shortly and was able to resume conversation.

The former utilities operator had to leave the room, but came back in a few minutes. He ascribed the attack to over-smoking.

The seizure came while he was smoking a cigar and talking to passengers. His face suddenly went extremely white. He arose and without a word walked quickly out of the room.

On returning he said it was his heart, and that he must cut down on his smoking. He seemed to have entirely recovered and remained for another hour chatting with his friends.

To protect "home industries" Insull refused today to be photographed by Spaniards.

Capt. Houck Arrested On Stabbing Charges

San Francisco, April 24 (AP). — Capt. Edward Houck, U. S. A., a recent arrival from Manila, was arrested late today, accused of the fatal stabbing of a civilian, Walter Potter.

Police said the stabbing took place in the army captain's home after a drinking spree. Mrs. Houck told officers her husband and Potter, a hardware dealer, had been together all afternoon. When they arrived home, she said, the captain refused to let Potter enter. An argument followed.

Merit to Rule In HOLC Jobs, Fahey Asserts

Chairman Says Agency Will Be Kept Clear of Spoils System.

The Home Owners Loan Corporation is not going to be operated as a political spoils system and the Congressional deadlocked Norris amendment placing jobs on a merit basis will be adhered to.

This was what newspapermen learned from Chairman John H. Fahey, of the corporation's board, yesterday when they sought information as to whether employes would be chosen according to merit or political influence.

"Congress certainly isn't going to get any jobs out of this board," Fahey said, adding:

"I am not in any controversy with Congress. It is the sworn duty of this board to employ on a basis of business, and we shall do so."

Amendment Discussed.

The chairman had called in newspapermen to discuss plans of the corporation to proceed against employes in State offices suspected of malfeasance or inefficiency.

The discussion was sidetracked temporarily for the Norris amendment, which provides that employes be chosen for their qualification, rather than by political patronage. The chairman said he understood the amendment, which has President Roosevelt's support, had reached a deadlocked stage between Senate and House conferees.

Mr. Fahey declined to discuss cases now in the hands of the Justice Department, but he emphasized that the malfeasance charges involve fewer than 50 persons out of some 17,000 full or part-time employes, or less than one employe in every 340.

Promises Swift Action.

"This proportion should be borne in mind in fairness to the majority," he declared, adding: "Wherever malfeasance is found and proved, the employes concerned will be dealt with promptly. Wherever incompetence is found and proved, the discharge of such employes will be equally prompt."

Mr. Fahey said conditions had improved in Illinois and New Jersey, where new State managers were employed because of bad showing on loans. He also said Pennsylvania's progress was not satisfactory, but that few States were making entirely satisfactory progress in handling loans, although the corporation now places more than $45,000,000 weekly.

Referring again to politics, the chairman said his organization would not tolerate State managers "being mixed up in any kind of political campaign."

Boat Building Code Approved by Johnson

A code for the boat building and repairing industry was approved yesterday by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator.

Officials predicted the agreement would increase employment by 5 per cent and in some cases raise minimum wages from 18 to 55 cents an hour. The code provides a maximum work week of 36 hours for half of the year and 44 hours for the remainder, with at least time and a half for overtime.

The District, Maryland and Virginia will be included in the South Atlantic division. The code will effect 3,000 concerns with a 1931 pay roll of $24,020,000.

The most famous beneficiary from the law is Gen. Jose Sanjuro, former commander in chief of the Spanish army, sentenced to death two years ago, then granted clemency, for leading a monarchist revolt against the republic.

He was convicted of plotting to place Don Juan Carlos, third son of former King Alfonso, on the throne. Sanjuro was a hero of years of campaigns in Africa and for bringing the territory there into subjugation was made Marquis de Riff by Alfonso.

Socialists' Arms Seized.

"The news is the most welcome I have ever received," he said when informed the amnesty bill would become law.

Sanjuro said he would go directly to Estoril, Portugal, with his family to live and that "I do not want to become involved in politics in any way whatsoever."

Creel to Decide Today On Senatorial Effort

San Francisco, April 24 (A.P.).—George Creel, author and regional director of the Emergency Employment Administration, said today he expected to reach a definite decision tomorrow on whether he will be a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor of California.

Sharp Earning Gains Reported

27.2 Per Cent Increase in March Over Last Year Disclosed.

Per capita weekly earnings in all industries increased 27.2 per cent from March, 1933, to March, 1934, Secretary of Labor Perkins announced yesterday.

She pointed out that the largest increase was 66.4 per cent in the iron and steel industry.

The increases were partially due, Miss Perkins said, to recovery agencies such as the NRA, PWA ad the AAA.

She said 62 of the 90 manufacturing industries reporting showed increases in per capita weekly earnings in March as compared with February. The weekly increases for all factory employes averaged 2.9 per cent over the month interval.

One of the most outstanding gains, according to the report, occurred in the iron and steel industry, where per capita weekly earnings in March were 8.8 per cent higher than in the preceding month. The automobile industry reported a gain of 7 per cent. Other major industries in which substantial gains were registered were men's and women's clothing, 4.9 per cent each; sawmills, 3.9 per cent; foundry and machine-shop products, 3.3 per cent; electrical machinery, 2.7 per cent, and cotton goods, 2.1 per cent.

Coolidge Treasury Aid Nomination Sent Senate

President Roosevelt yesterday sent to the Senate the nomination of Thomas Jefferson Coolidge, of Boston, to be Undersecretary of the Treasury, chief assistant to Secretary Morgenthau.

His appointment was indicated earlier this month when Mr. Morgenthau chose him as special fiscal adviser to succeed Earle Bailie, of a New York brokerage house. A Harvard graduate of 1915, Mr. Coolidge was vice president of the Boston First National Bank.

Baruch Spends Day In Roosevelt Talks

Financier Sees President En Route to New York.

President Roosevelt spent much time yesterday in conversation with Bernard Mannes Baruch, New York financier and economist, who stopped over in Washington on his way North after a visit to his South Carolina estate.

Subjects discussed were not divulged at the White House, but it was presumed they included the current agitation for silver legislation and other problems confronting business.

Mr. Baruch was a luncheon guest of Mr. Roosevelt, and later accompanied him to the opening baseball game and to a meeting at the Department of Commerce which the President addressed. Throughout the afternoon he remained at his side.

Senators Find Silver Holder List Is Vague

Morgenthau Sends First Section; Senate May Make Own Survey.

were offset by figures showing equally large sales for future delivery.

In an effort to find out who really holds silver in this country the Senate may have to make its own inquiry. Morgenthau, in a letter to Secretary of the Senate Edwin A. Halsey, suggested as much, explaining he had found "considerable difficulty" in getting necessary information in certain cases.

A step in this direction already has been taken by Ferdinand Pecora, counsel to the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, who has sent out a questionnaire designed to elicit information about silver holding and hoarding. Until the remainder of Morgenthau's lists are received it is not expected the Senate will proceed further to unravel the puzzle.

The list submitted yesterday by Morgenthau contained several hundred names, alphabetically arranged from "A" to "H." Further lists will be sent to the Senate as soon as the Treasury can tabulate the names.

Those listed were persons or companies holding in excess of 50,000 ounces of "spot" silver or more than one futures contract, to buy or sell. It was explained that a futures contract covered 25,000 ounces of silver. Morgenthau reported that holders of lesser amounts of silver "are very numerous."

Can Silver Scrutinized.

According to the list, Continental Can Co. held 200,097.23 ounces of "spot" silver, but also had eight contracts to sell for future delivery. Thus, with the company obligated to deliver 200,000 ounces, its net holdings amounted to 97.23 ounces.

The Conway Co., of 122 East Forty-second street, New York, was listed with no "spot" silver, but as having purchased for a future delivery five contracts of 125,000 ounces. But the company also was down as being obligated under five contracts. Thus its options to purchase were offset by options it had sold.

Carle C. Conway, described as one of the hosts at the dinner given Monday night to Congressional silver advocates, is the chairman of the board of the Continental Can Co. He also is listed in Who's Who as the president of the "Conway Company."

Robert M. Harris, member of the cotton brokerage firm of Harriss & Voss, also was described as one of the hosts at the Monday dinner. He has appeared several times before Congressional committees urging measures providing for currency inflation. His firm was on the Morgenthau list as holding one long option contract for 25,000 ounces of silver.

The largest holder of silver listed was the Chase National Bank, with 18,096,109.59 ounces. In addition, the Chase was listed as holding 52½ contracts for the purchase of silver, which would make its total holdings, in hand or on option, 19,408,509 ounces. But the Chase also was recorded giving 749 contracts for future delivery, which would call for 18,725,000 ounces, leaving the bank with a net position of only 683,609 ounces.

Other Firms Hedge.

The Chemical National Bank & Trust Co., of New York, was listed as holding 3,726,015.40 ounces, but also as having made 149 contracts to sell, which would call for 3,725,000 ounces. The Corn Products Refining Co. likewise had an almost perfectly hedged position. Its "spot" holding was listed at 449,391.96 ounces, with 18 contracts to sell 450,000 ounces.

The Atwater Kent Co., however, recorded as holding 1,578,027.93 ounces, with no long or short contracts. The Eastman Kodak Co. was listed as holding 12,000,514.59 ounces, with 139 contracts to deliver. The latter would take only 3,475,000 ounces of that company's supply.

All kinds of business enterprises were on the list. The Appalachian Development Co. was down as holding 24,845 ounces; the Appleton Coated Paper Co. as holding 299,356.85 ounces; the Broseco Corporation, 1,127,400.51 ounces; Chute Investment Co. of Chicago, 175,499.57 ounces; the Dana Investment Co. as holding 250,137 ounces, with ten contracts to sell—an offset; Domestic Silks Inc., as holding 150,028 ounces, with six contracts to sell; E. P. W. Realty Co. of Brooklyn, N. Y., as holding seven purchase contracts; the Fall River (Mass.) Herald as holding 50,401 ounces; General Publishing Co. as holding 126,379 ounces, and the Howard Automobile Co. of San Francisco as holding 501,109 ounces and with ten contracts to buy an additional 250,000 ounces.

The list contained a large number of banks, with offices both in this country, in Mexico and abroad. There also were listed a number of importers, mining and smelting companies. The American Express Co., which deals in foreign exchange, was listed as holding 1,103,072 ounces of silver with two contracts to purchase and 41 to sell.

Chunilal Mehta and Co., of Bombay, India, was listed as having 48 contracts to buy, which would be 1,200,000 ounces. F. C. Adda, of Alexandria, Egypt, was listed with seven contracts to buy. Meyer Chimchilachevili, also of Alexandria, was listed as holding two contracts to buy.

Bryan's Son Holds Contracts.

Among the names of individuals which attracted attention was that of William J. Bryan, jr., of Los Angeles—presumably a son of the "Great Commoner" who shook the country years ago with his demand for remonetization of silver. Bryan was listed as holding four cantracts to buy 100,000 ounces.

Lester Armour and P. D. Armour, members of Chicago's great packing family, were listed as having ten and five contracts, respectively, to buy silver. Along with names of persons with addresses in England, Switzerland and France, was that of Marquis D'Albano, of Paris, with one contract to purchase 25,000 ounces.

Count Schiff Giorgini, also of Paris, was listed as holding six contracts to buy 150,000 ounces. The Countess de Janze, of Paris, was listed as holding two contracts to purchase 50,000 ounces.

There was nothing to indicate whether this Countess de Janze was the widow of the former Representative from Congress, Thomas Jefferson Ryan, or the Count de Janze's first wife, the former Alice Silverthorne, of Chicago and Buffalo. Count de Janze, a French journalist, was in Washington last fall. He died after December 24 last after a brief illness at the Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore.

His first marriage with Alice Silverthorne was set aside in 1927 by the Roman Rota after she wounded Raymond V. de Trafford, son of an English knight, whom she met while on a hunting trip to Africa.

Washingtonians listed were W. A. Baumert and J. D. Rickard, holding together 24,788 ounces of silver; Emily M. Crosby, of Chevy Chase, Md., holding 150,578 ounces; J. F. Crosby, as holding 273,424 ounces; John F. Crosby, trustee for Emilie M. Crosby, holding 43,823 ounces, and Martin Goerl, holding 12,027 ounces.

District Funds Bill Has Public Airing

Post Staff Photos.

agree caused Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, chairman of the Senate District Committee, to postpone action on the measure and to call a meeting of the committee for 10:30 a. m. today to consider the measure.

"If you can't agree," he warned, "I am going to cut the Gordian knot and perhaps both of you will be sorry. I do not want to do anything which shall sink the Capper-Cramton park act, but these other matters are of very great importance."

House Group Called.

Representative Mary T. Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey, chairman of the House District Committee which sat jointly with the Senate committee, also has called a meeting of that committee for 10:30 a. m. today at which the public works and other measures will be considered.

Arno B. Camerer, Director of Nationl Parks, and vice chairman and executive officer of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission; Thomas S. Settle, of the Park and Planning Commission, and other park advocates, stuck to their program despite sharp questions and criticism from Representatives Norton, Carl M. Weideman, of Michigan; Vincent L. Palmisano, of Maryland (Democrats), and others.

"A personal survey made within the last two weeks shows that the present District Tuberculosos Hospital is most insanitary," Representative Norton said. "It is a fact that the tuberculosis death rate in the District is the second highest in the entire Nation. At the hospital 220 beds are crowded into space for 100."

"We have only 300 beds in all, and 1,000 patients," Commissioner Hazen said.

Defends Park Importance.

"Surely," Mrs. Norton asked Mr. Settle, "you'll admit that some of these projects are more important than your parks, won't you?"

"No," Mr. Settle replied. "We can't admit that."

"Although Washington has the second highest death rate in the country?" Mrs. Norton insisted.

"Development of our park program will keep people out of the hospitals and jails," Mr. Camerer said.

"You are putting your parks in the wrong sections of the city," Representative Weideman interrupted bruskly. "Your whole program is wrong. To improve the health of the people the parks and playground facilities should be developed in the congested and poorer sections of the city. That is not being done."

"I agree with you," Mrs. Norton said. "The parks in this city do not supply the need you say they do," she added turning to Mr. Camerer. "The Park Commission is concerned solely with beautifying the city."

"Uusing their funds for trimmings instead of developing facilities where they are needed," concurred Mr. Weideman.

Cites Acts Authority.

"The whole purpose and result of this bill is to hamstring the whole Capper-Crampton act," Mr. Settle said. That act authorized expenditure of $16,000,000 for parks, as appropriated by Congress, to be repaid at the rate of $1,000,000 a year.

"I can't let the record impute motives and purposes to the District Commissioners," Mr. Prettyman interjected.

The Park Commission representatives refused suggestions advanced by Senator King, who presided at the hearing, by Mr. Palmisano and others that all reference to parks be eliminated from the bill. The Park Commission wanted their $2,000,000, they said.

The commission has a "very strong" letter from Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes, favoring inclusion of the park funds, Mr. Settle said.

"I don't believe Secretary Ickes would stand with the Park and Planning Commission against the people of the District of Columbia and tell them they can't have a badly needed tuberculosis hospital," Mr. Prettyman commented.

"Fault of Congress."

Senator James J. Davis (Republican), of Pennsylvania, asked if the lack of facilities to care for tuberculosis sufferers was not principally the fault of Congress and not of the District Commissioners.

"Yes," agreed Mrs. Norton, "but I believe the Commissioners should have brought the matter to the attenition of Congress in such a manner as would have compelled action."

Senator Davis criticized working conditions in Gallinger Hospital and asked why nurses were required to work 12 hours a day.

Senator King sought to get agreement between the park representatives and the Commissioners and asked them to confer immediately. The conference, however, was unproductive, Mr. Prettyman subsequently reported.

"Three alternatives are open to the committee," he said. "Leave all reference to parks out of the bill and require the District to pay $2,000,000 a year into the Treasury for parks and this works program. That is not sound financing and the District can not bear that burden and meet its current needs."

Discuss Tax Increase.

"You can raise the taxes, can't you," interrupted the wealthy Senator Hamilton J. Kean (Republican), of New Jersey. "The District taxes are lowest in the country anyhow."

"Yes," agreed Senator King, "District taxes are low and could be raised."

"The second proposition is to leave the bill as it now stands," Mr. Prettyman continued. "That would mean simply that the District would be required to repay the park purchase advances under the Capper-Cramton act plus the public works advance within a period of 19 years instead of in 12 years.

"The third proposal is that in event of appropriation under the Capper-Cramton act the District would repay annually into the Treasury not more than $1,250,000 which would be equally divided between the park and the public works debt."

Says Rate's Too High.

"The first proposal would require an amortization of $2,000,000 a year," Commissioner Allen said. "That is too high. No business, either the District or private business, could stand such a rate. Such high amortization is what wrecked so many businesses in the last few years."

Responding to questions by Representative Ambrose J. Kennedy (Democrat), Maryland, the Commissioners said they would follow the program of the school officials in expending the funds available for schools. Mr. Kennedy also objected that building of walls around Lorton was going contrary to modern trend in penology.

Dr. George C. Havenner, former president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, outlined a program favored by that organization which called for expenditures as follows: Schools, $3,900,000; Municipal Center, $4,000,000; tuberculosis hospital, $1,500,000; Gallinger addition, $400,000; sewage disposal plant, $8,000,000; wall around Lorton, $100,000; elimination of Michigan avenue grade crossing, $450,000; branch libraries, $650,000, and new Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast Bridge, $1,000,000. Parks should be left entirely out of the public works bill, Dr. Havenner said.

Evan H. Tucker, president of the Northeast Washington Citizens Association, favored the public works program and criticized the purchases of the Park Commission, saying his section of the city had been grossly neglected.

Attack on Park Body.

Mrs. Leslie Wright, of the Forest Hills Citizens Association, sharply criticized the Park Commission, saying "whatever we've got in our section we've got through the kindness of the Commissioners and not through the Park Commission."

"The Park Commission doesn't care one thing about the health of the children," she cried. "Certainly hospitals and schools come first. Children only go to school once. Visitors can come back again to see the beauties of the Capital."

"The Park and Planning Commission has been going in for the frills and not giving the things where they are needed," Representative Weideman said.

Responsibility for the involved situation was laid at the door of divided responsibility, and Senator King said he always had been opposed to dual control.

"You'll always have the same trouble until you consolidate authority under the District Commissioners," Mr. Donovan said.

"You are absolutely right," shouted Dr. Llewellyn Jordan, representing the Board of Trade.

Miss Harlean James, executive secretary of the American Civic Association, and Charles F. Consaul, vice president of the District committee of the Committee of 100 for the Federal City, argued on the side of the Park Commission. J. Bond Smith, general counsel for the Maryland - National Capital Park and Planning Commission, urged that nothing be done to upset the Capper-Cramton act.

Tugwell Given Higher Post By Roosevelt

New Deal Army Laughs as Critics See "Brains Truster" Promoted.

phy as expounded by Dr. Tugwell, before permitting a vote.

"They have the votes to confirm him," said Senator L. J. Dickinson (Republican), Iowa, one of the chief Republican critics of AAA. "But there are some aspects of the matter that I think should be discussed.

"Both Tugwell and Wallace are taking a new tack now. They deny they are for regimentation and insist they are conservatives. But what about that little pants presser up in New Jersey who was thrown in jail because he charged a customer 35 cents for pressing a suit instead of 40 cents as ordered under NRA? And there is the case of the Rochester delicatessen man who was fined for throwing in a loaf of bread with a bottle of milk.

"It is all very well for them to deny they are for regimentation, but these are things which are happening under the New Deal program. These ideas are now being carried down into the States and as a result of it you have the kind of cases I have just cited."

Tugwell to Address Bankers.

But possibly there is something in Dr. Tugwell's assertion that he is a conservative—for he has been asked to address the New York State Bankers Association at Buffalo later this week. Senator Dickinson also will speak in Buffalo tomorrow but he will deliver his message to the Erie County Republican rally instead of the bankers.

After Moley left Washington, the main fire on the Brain Trust was directed at the youthful, classic features of Tugwell. It was particularly strong when he championed new food and drug legislation and then after a lull it flared up hotter than ever during the Wirt incident. There have been suggestions that President Roosevelt shuffle Dr. Tugwell out of the deck to remove a target of attack and it is known that Dr. Tugwell had indicated his willingness to retire at any time the President might feel his presence embarrassing. The promotion to the Undersecretaryship was the White House answer.

Pilot of Southern Cross Hurt in Auto Accident

San Bernardino, Calif., April 24 (AP).—Captain Harry Lyon, navigator of the airplane Southern Cross on its flight from San Francisco to Australia, was in St. Bernardine's hospital today, suffering from back injuries received yesterday when his automobile overturned.

Lyon was en route from Columbus, Ohio, to Los Angeles, to purchase an airplane for the England-to-Australia competitive flight, October 20. Physicians said he probably would not be able to take part in the flight.

Tokyo's Envoy Called to Tell About Warning

Explanation of Nation's China Policy Given by Saito.

indicates the interview was of a formal nature and not a discussion of details. Saito's reference to having shown newspaper clippings may indicate he came to give information, to invest news reports with at least a quasi-official character.

Reactions to Tokyo's posting of a "no tresspassing" sign in China continued to be world wide.

World Reaction.

In Geneva, according to the Associated Press, the Chinese government through its minister to Switzerland set about challenging Japan's "meddling."

In Paris concern was expressed over the manifesto though a spokesman for the Foreign Office said "we are doing nothing except in connection with the United States, Great Britain and Holland."

In London the suggestion of joint action was frowned upon as too risky in view of the delicate nature of the situation. Translated, this means protests which the various governments are not prepared to back to the limit are considered worse than useless.

In Tokyo Foreign Minister Hirota began preparing an explanation of the manifesto which would simultaneously satisfy the Japanese public, particularly the military group, and allay world suspicions all too evidently aroused.

Retreat Left Open.

Tokyo has never blessed the new policy with an official sponsoring. Newspaper correspondents were merely shown what purported to be the draft of a manifesto the Foreign Office was thinking of issuing. Eiji Amau, in charge of press relations for the Foreign Office, permitted the draft to become public property—but only after conferring the night before with 25 leading political figures, it was reported from Tokyo.

This method of conveying diplomatic news made it difficult for the powers to take notice. There has never been any question of the authoritative nature of the reports; it is only the usual official character which has been lacking.

Gradually it became evident Japan did not intend to issue the prepared manifesto but wished to leave the new statement of policy in its present bybrid for. This way it is easier to back away if retreat should seem expedient.

Britain First to Act.

Britain broke the ice by instructing her Ambassador in Tokyo to request fuller information. The United States, not apparently working in conjunction with Britain though the British Ambassador talked with Far Eastern experts in the Department yesterday, decided in its turn that notice could be taken properly. Saito's visit to Phillips followed.

World opinion is united in viewing Japan's pronouncements as grave. The Japanese alone profess inability to understand the alarm which underlies reaction to their "restatement." They say there is little new in the proposed manifesto, that Foreign Minister Hirota had said much the same things in a speech before the Diet some time ago, that no one is menanced.

The rest of the world appears to see a threat to the Nine-Power treaty in the declaration and something closely resembling the posting of a "no tresspassing" sign by one who has as little right to be in the barred area as any one except the Chinese.

The Nine-Power treaty binds the signatories to a full and frank communication of views whenever a situation arises which threatens the stability of the pact. It also provides the powers shall:

1. Respect the sovereignty, independence and territorial and administrative integrity of China.
2. Provide the fullest and most unembarrassed opportunity to China to develop and maintain herself.
3. Use their influence to effectually estblish and maintain the principle of equal opportunity for the commerce and industry of all nations throughout China.
4. Refrain from taking advantage of conditions in China to seek special privileges which would abridge the rights of citizens of friendly states, and from countenancing action inimical to the security of such states.

All those paragraphs were inserted for a purpose. Japanese threats to object to loans to China, to the sale of equipment which might have military value, and to the employment by China of aviation experts are thought to tresspass on the provisions of the treaty.

Just Novices, Gov. Peery Says Of Rainey's Fishing (?) Party

Richmond, April 24 (AP).—Those mountain trout that wouldn't bite Congressional bait up on the Rapidan last week-end made a mighty good fry over at the Virginia executive mansion.

Speaker Rainey's boast that he caught more fish (four) than all the rest of the Congressional party put together at the old Hoover camp got a big laugh on Virginia's capitol hill today.

"Why, we left them some of those we caught," said Gov. Peery, who headed a group of Virginia officials who caught 60 at the same camp on the same week-end. "You've got to work to catch those fish," added the lanky Virginia executive, who learned his fishing in the mountains of southwest Virginia.

"It seems that it was a case of the early worm catching the fish," said Abe Staples, the new Virginia attorney general.

"Even I caught as many as the Speaker," said John Q. Rhodes, the Virginia motor vehicle director, who with a grin boasted of his beginner's luck in the sport.

Game and Inland Fisheries Commissioner Carl Nolting completed the Virginia party, which unknowingly far outclassed the piscatorial success of the Speaker, Majority Leader Byrns, Chairman McReynolds (Democrat), Tennessee, of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, and Representative A. Willis Robertson (Democrat), Virginia, who came down from Washington.

While Speaker Rainey was telling his friends that fishing isn't so good on the Rapidan this year, Gov. Peery's official family was smacking lips at the mansion last night.

"They were the best fish I ever ate," said Secretary of the Commonwealth Peter Saunders.

Cleaning Code Price Protests Slated Today

Highly Controversial Question Raised in Presser's Arrest.

Bitter reaction in the cleaning and dyeing industry over a jail sentence imposed on a New Jersey man who charged a nickel too little for pressing a suit probably will be reflected today at a code hearing.

Critics of the imprisonment and of NRA's cleaning and dyeing code in general indicated they would demand that local boards be empowered to fix prices for the business. In recent weeks scales have been set on a regional or virtually Nation-wide basis.

Individual owners protested conditions in their localities made the NRA scales oppressive. They also prepared to seek revision of code provisions governing trade practices and related subjects which have contributed to making the cleaning and dyeing industry a thorn in the side of the Recovery Administration.

A record for complaints has been established by the cleaning code. It was under a similar State code that Jacob Maged, owner of a small Jersey City tailoring establishment, drew a $100 fine and 30 days in jail for charging a customer 35 instead of 40 cents for pressing a suit.

Sentence Suspended.

After unfavorable public reaction, Judge Robert F. Kinkead suspended Maged's sentence and remitted the fine after he had served three days. The judge announced he would have his clothes pressed in Maged's shop.

Price-fixing proposals are expected to include requests for public hearings in cities and towns to give each community a new scale of its own. The charge will be advanced that present prices reduce the volume of business and yield excessive profit under efficient operating conditions.

Opponents will attempt to prove the existing code caused reduction rather than increase in employment. Changes intended to remedy such problems will be offered.

G. Degreest Larner, deputy administrator, former New York broker and owner of a tobacco farm at Bel Alton, Md., will conduct the hearing in the Burlington Hotel.

Verbal fireworks also may flash May 4 at a hearing on proposed modification of the retail code, called by Kenneth Dameron, deputy administrator. Owners will ask to reduce store hours without cutting wages.

Other proposed modifications will include: A ban on advertising any article as free when delivery is contingent on sale of another item; prohibition of the gambling element such as the "suit club" plan and limitation on the number of persons working unrestricted hours.

Several employes criticized a proposed code for the telephone industry at a hearing yesterday. One of their outstanding demands was for inclusion of a provision to prevent replacement of operators by installation of additional dial telephone.

Miss Mary White, Normal, Ill., representing the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, charged telephone companies wtih using coercion to force employes to purchase company stock or sell it to their friends. She added many of the securities involved represented investment in over-financial companies.

Edward Bieretz, Washington representative of the electrical workers, protested the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. charged high rates to consumers and paid low wages to employes. He said the corporation was creating a large reserve at the expense of labor and consumers.

Jobs for All When New Deal Gets Going, Coyle Tells Nurses

Spending Program Double Size of CWA Needed, Says PWA Aid.

If the President really succeeds in making the people try the New Deal, our descendants will be "larger, brighter, gayer and better-looking," David Cushman Coyle, one of the "revolutionaries" accused by Dr. William A. Wirt, declared last night.

Mr. Coyle, addressing 7,000 trained nurses assembled for the second day of their biennial convention at Washington Auditorium, explained that a Government spending program "about double the size of the CWA program at its peak," would make business so active "that practically every one can get a job. No such program can be adopted immediately," he said, "because the people are still hoping for recovery to come down out of the sky without costing anybody anything. When they get tired of waiting and sufficiently hungry to adopt a vigorous program, then the Government can declare war on the depression and force the issue in spite of conservative opposition."

Another speaker at the morning session of the convention was Mrs. Roosevelt, who discussed "What Does the Public Expect from Nursing?"

"More and more," she said, "we expect nurses to show us how to live physically, so we may be healthier and happier people." The present trend, she continued, is away from private and toward public nursing. Mrs. Roosevelt made a plea for more nursery schools, where the nurse can not only help the child, but also teach its mother how to care for it.

Speaks at Auditorium.

Mr. Coyle's address was delivered at the Auditorium after a day of sectional and group meetings held by the nurses. The speaker is a consulting engineer of the Public Works Administration and one of six individuals whom Dr. Wirt named as having disclosed to him plans for a "Brain Trust" revolution which would overthrow President Roosevelt. Coyle has also written extensively on the subject of wind vibration in tall buildings.

"When everyone has been employed and business is active and profitable," he said, "the Government will, of course, have to have a tax system that will more than pay for the Federal spending program. The taxes will have to be imposed on incomes rather than on business, because if anybody tries to help business and send business the bill, the effect will be about as helpful as buying father a new car and charging it to his account. Another reason the taxes will have to be laid on personal incomes is so that most of the surplus income can be turned back into business without passing through the old normal process of hope, investment, bankruptcy and disgust. Still another reason is that high surtaxes will discourage the freedom of initiative of men like Mr. Insull, and leave more freedom for the smaller business men who make up the solid and stable part of the economic system.

"In general the purpose of the income tax and spending program will be to supply business with plenty of orders and keep down the supply of capital, so that if possible the orders constantly may strain the capacity of the machinery. If industry can be kept lean like a dog with plenty of running and no extra fat, then it will be a good healthy dog."

Hits Old Teachings.

"Everything we were taught in school is exactly wrong, revealed the New Dealer. "Thrift is no longer a virtue, saving for a rainy day makes it rain all the harder; spending is what makes the wheels go 'round and increases everybody's income."

He declared the Administration is "hesitating" on its spending program to wait for public psychology to catch up with it. "It is true," went on the wind-vibration expert, "that if a bold program were adopted and carried through the country could be cured almost overnight. Perhaps the country is ready to listen to the whole truth, face the facts and snap into prosperity."

Coyle painted an exuberant picture of the great "cultural age" which will ensue after the Administration really takes the lid off the Treasury and turns on the New Deal full force. "There will be comparatively few men in the factories," he said, "and they will not be tending machines but watching dials that tell how the automatic machines are running. In agriculture also the men and the acres will be few but the bushels per acre will be many. All the food that the people can eat and all the mechanical products that can be made out of our natural resources will be produced and distributed without employing any large proportion of the available labor. The rest of the people who are not in school, on the sick list, or on old age pensions, will have to be employed in services."

"Once the President succeeds in leading the country to the New Deal and making the people try it," it will produce, in Coyle's opinion, a people "less mean and avaricious, more generous, more reckless and more adventurous."

Miss Anderson Speaks.

Another view of the New Deal was given by Mary A. Anderson, director of the Women's Bureau of the Department of Labor. Miss Anderson spoke at the Government section of the American Nurses Association, meeting in the Mayflower ballroom yesterday afternoon. The A. N. A. is one of the three organizations under whose auspices the convention is held. The other two organizations are the National League of Nursing Education and the National Organization for Public Health Nursing.

Declaring that "cheap woman power" was one of the factors which brought on the depression, because the purchasing power of woman wage earners was not great enough to buy back the goods they produced, Miss Anderson told of the efforts of NRA to raise women's industrial status. She explained that only one-fourth of the codes carry provisions calling for lower wages for men than women, "despite the fact that women in general have been paid rates below those of men.

"The setting of a minimum, irrespective of sex is, I feel, a tremendous gain," said the Women's Bureau director. "Nevertheless, while we as women have cause to be encouraged through the formulation of the codes and their resultant benefits to women we do not want to feel that our job is done, with one-fourth of the codes still allowing sex differentials. Also there is still a big army of women covered by no code who will themselves have to battle for better standards."

Another advantage that NRA has brought to women, Miss Anderson explained, is that they are no longer exploited by being forced to work longer hours than men. "To the many women who are mothers and home makers and must perform two jobs, one in the home and one in the factory," she went on, "short work hours give much additional needed time for care of home and family. For a vast majority of women in industry the new law means more leisure, more time to follow their own personal interests and pursuits, more time for relaxation, recreation, self-development and culture."

Miss Mitchell Speaks.

Mary Lee Mitchell, of St. Louis, spoke to the private duty section of the A. N. A. in the auditorium yesterday afternoon on "The Eight-Hour Day for the Private Duty Nurse."

"The eight-hour day, the dream of all private duty nurses, has at last come true for us in St. Louis," said Miss Mitchell. She told how it had been brought about at the nurses', rather than the patients' expense in hospitals, when the former lowered their $6 daily salary rate to $5 and bought their own meals.

"The public and the doctors still need educating," she said. "Twelve hour and even some twenty-four hour nurses are being called in homes. At first the laity held up their hands in horror when we spoke of three nurses, but when they learn what this means in nursing care they will welcome the change. Just watch your own work on a hard case at the end of eight hours and see how you, unconsciously, begin to lag. To have someone fresh and alert come on means added nursing care for the patient, and added nursing care means quicker, more complete recovery."

"No need to tell you," she continued, "what 12 hours means to the nurse herself. How many times have we all refused exceptionally desirous invitations because after being on duty from 7 a. m. to 7 p. m. we had only time to clean our white shoes, put buttons in a clean uniform, take a bath and fall into bed, to arise when the alarm arouses us, still exhausted. Can you imagine anything more wonderful than getting off duty at 3 p. m., resting, going out to dinner or the theatre, getting your night's sleep and not being worn to a frazzle the next day?"

Woman Editor Heard.

Miss Mary M. Roberts, editor of the American Journal of Nursing, was another who addressed the private duty section. Miss Roberts discussed efforts to improve standard of training in nursing schools, in order to limit the present oversupply of trained nurses. Since 1931, she said, the number of young women graduating from nursing schools annually had been substantially reduced, with the result that those now in the profession were better able to secure employment. The raising of standards in the schools also redounded to the benefit of the patient, Miss Roberts pointed out.

Today's joint session will be the briefest so far scheduled in the convention, which ends Thursday night with an address by Mrs. August Belmont. At 9:15 Miss Effie J. Taylor, president of the National League of Nursing Education, will call the session to order. There will be a talk on "Changes in the Field of Education" by Bess Goodykoontz, Assistant Commissioner of Education in the Department of the Interior, and another on "The Changing Order and Nursing" by Annie W. Goodrich, dean of the Yale School of Nursing at New Haven. The remainder of the day and evening will be taken up with division and section meetings.

At 8 a. m., prior to the joint session, the A. N. A. house of delegates will meet in the auditorium, with President Elnora Thomson presiding. At 11:15, at the conclusion of Miss Goodrich's speech, A. N. A. members will remain in the auditorium for a discussion of "Nursing the Patient."

Mrs. Linzee Blagden, of New York, will talk on "The Patient;" Dr. Charles E. Kiely, of the University of Cincinnati, on "The Physician;" Miss Alma Corbitt, superintendent of the New Charleston Hospital, of Charleston, W. Va., on "The Director of Nurses," and Miss Terea Rutledge, of New York, on "The Private Duty Nurse."

Banquet This Evening.

At 7:30 p. m. today the A. N. A. government section will hold a banquet in the Mayflower ballroom, at which Miss Thomson and Clara D. Noyes, director of the American Red Cross Nursing Service, will speak.

The N. O. P. N. will hold general sessions at 11:15 a. m. today. In the National Red Cross Building Robert T. Lansdale, field representative of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration, will discuss "Personnel Policies for Official Agencies." Dr. C. E. A. Winslow, of the Yale School of Medicine, also will talk on "Challenges of the Future."

In the United States Chamber of Commerce, Morris S. Viteless, assistant professor of psychology in the University of Pennsylvania, will talk on "Psychological Aspects of Reemployment." Hazel Stiebeling, senior food economist of the United States Bureau of Home Economics, will give an address on "Developing Good Nutrition Through Public Health Nursing." There will be several closed luncheons, a sightseeing program in the afternoon and closed dinners this evening.

The National League of Nursing Education will meet in a session conducted by the committee of subsidiary workers in the Raleigh Hotel ballroom. Alden B. Mills, of Chicago, who is managing editor of The Modern Hospital, will talk on "The Need of Subsidiary Workers in Nursing Services, as Seen by the Committee on the Cost of Medical Care." Miss Elizabeth Burgess, chairman of the New York Committee on Subsidiary Workers, will consider "The Subsidiary Worker in Nursing Services from the Viewpoint of the Committee on Subsidiary Workers."

the animal, Dr. Cornish arises many times a night when the subject stirs restlessly.

"The dog is like a new-born baby, or a puppy," Dr. Cornish said. "He displays signs of restlessness at night and occasionally kicks off the covers, like an infant.

"I immediately arise and attend to his physical wants. It seems that the animal, although still unconscious, becomes thirsty. When I pour water into his mouth, he immediately becomes restful."

Third Experiment.

The dog is the third to which Dr. Cornish has succeeded in restoring the physical functions.

Two other animals upon which the professor conducted his unusual experiments were brought back to "life" for a few hours.

"The most critical period in the experiments is the first two days," Dr. Cornish stated. "The heart pumps so fast that it tends to exhaust itself.

"On this animal, the heartbeats reached the terrific action of 220 beats a minute. At this rate the heart would have worn itself out from shock.

"A salt solution was injected into the veins and the heart, given something to pump into the veins, slowed down to normal within an hour."

Loudoun Body Sets Tax Rate At 80 Cents

$127,000 Budget Allots $82,500 for Use of Schools.

Leesburg, Va., April 24 (Spl.).—Fixing a tax rate of 80 cents per $100 valuation for a general county expenditure of $45,031.98 and an $82,500 school appropriation, making a total proposed expenditure of $127,531.98, the Loudoun County Board of Supervisors yesterday adopted the budget for the fiscal year beginning July 1.

The school budget has been reduced to a danger point because of an expected decrease in the State appropriation for schools, Superintendent of schools O. L. Emerick said in asking the board to appropriate $85,000 to the schools or allow a 60-cent school rate. The board, however, made no change in the budget and sold the superintendent he would "have to cut expenses as they were compelled to do."

Estimating that it would require about $1,267 to complete the addition to the clerk's office an unfinished CWA project, the board today ordered J. T. Hirst, former local Civil Works administrator, to draw up plans and specifications for this work and to call for bids. To protect records in the vault exposed to the spring rains, Mr. Hirst was commissioned to install a temporary felt roof over the building at once.

The treasurer's room, in the clerk's office is to be partitioned, half the space to be given to the office of the superintendent of schools. Space will be provided in the new addition for treasurer's records.

After listening to pleas from all sections of the county that a former resolution denying the use of the courthouse lawn for religious services be rescinded, the board today authorized use of the courthouse green for such services during July and August on condition that all safety regulations are met. Supervisors Rogers and Grubb voted against the resolution.

Virginia's Colorful History Since Colonial Times Preserved in Priceless Records

Scholars from all over the United States now journey for research work in American history to the Archives Division of the Virginia State Library (top) at Richmond. More than 1,500,000 ancient documents are stored here. Bottom—The late Dr. Henry Read McIlwaine (Foster Studio photo) directed the gathering of the early documents from 1907 until his death last month.

(Editor's note: In the Archives Annex of the Virginia State Library, Richmond, are more than 1,500,000 priceless records and manuscripts of colonial Virginia. They probably form the richest mine of early Americana in the country. Miss Helene Philibert, of Washington, has long been engaged in this work in the Archives Annex. In the exclusive story below, Miss Philibert tells the romance of these Virginia treasures.

By Helene Philibert.

The colorful history of Virginia, from the days of settlement through the stirring era of the Civil War, emerges from the past in a building in Richmond's famed Capitol square.

Known as the Archives Annex of the Virginia State Library, this building houses more than 1,500,000 of the Old Dominion's priceless original records of Virginia life from colonial days.

Each year thousands journey from all parts of the United States to pore over their yellowed pages. The collection is known as one of the finest compilations of Americana possessed by any State in the Union. And to this treasure trove nearly every county in Virginia has contributed.

Collected in 16 Years.

This work of collecting Virginia's historical treasures into a central place of deposit for reference by research workers and scholars was begun 16 years ago. Through an act of the Virginia Assembly of 1918, public officials of Virginia's towns and counties were authorized "to transfer to the Virginia State Library for preservation official books, records, documents, original papers, maps, newspaper files, printed books or portraits."

In 1920, the Assembly appropriated $40,000 for the erection of the present fire-proof Archives Annex to the State Library. The preservation of records within its walls was begun the following year, under direction of the late Dr. Henry Read McIlwaine, Virginia State librarian from 1907 until his death last month.

Among the first viringa counties to offer their old volumes was Charles City County, through the noted authority on Virginia colonial history, Dr. Lyon G. Tyler. Other counties which soon followed suit were Amherst, Brunswick, Carolina, Cumberland, Elizabeth City, Essex, King William, Fairfax, Middlesex, old Rappahannock, Spotsylvania, Prince George, Prince William and Lancaster.

Records From 1650.

Northumberland County transferred its "Deeds and Order Books," covering from the date of its establishment in 1650 to 1752, to the Archives files. Prominent in these are the names of the Lee and Ball families and that of George Eskridge, the county's most distinguished lawyer, for whom, it is said, George Washington was named.

More than 300,000 military papers, covering pirate raids, Indian encounters and both Revolutionary and Civil Wars, are stored here. The library has the parole of Lord Cornwallis, delivered at the surrender of Yorktown in October, 1781; the muster and pay rolls of the War of 1812 and the Civil War, and 38 volumes of records of the Revolutionary War, as well as rejected claim papers for Revolutionary bounty land.

Even the polls taken in the field for the election of Jefferson Davis in 1861 are among the curious relics of Virginia history in the building.

Nathaniel Bacon Note.

A note written by Nathaniel Bacon on October 27, 1674, and bearing the only signature of the "First Virginia Rebel," is another unique exhibit.

One yellowed sheaf of papers bears the signature of Speaker Peter Randolph at the bottom of an address of the House of Burgesses to Gov. Alexander Spotswood. The marriage contract between Thomas Jefferson and Martha Skelton is in the files.

Among manuscripts here are letters of 1849 and 1850 from competing architects submitting designs for the Washington Monument and more than 200 pieces relating to the Society of the Cincinnati, from its formation in 1783 until 1810.

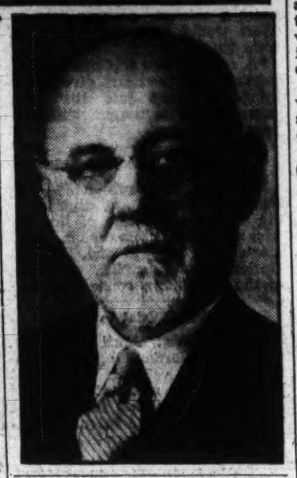
Prized by genealogical research enthusiasts are the parish books deposited by the Episcopal Theological Seminary in Alexandria. Other notable papers are the George Roger Clark manuscripts.

As these ancient records were presented to the archives division, many were seen to be in need of restoration. Out of this need grew the unique hand-repairing department operating in the building today.

Pages Covered.

Experts now make the tattered manuscripts and volumes stanch for years to come. New bindings are made of leather, with the original parchment bindings preserved as inlays. Pages of the books are preserved by coverings of silk gauze, which allows the lettering to be read clearly, but prevents the aged and brittle paper from shattering at a touch.

With State funds for restoration work limited, chapters of the following patriotic societies contributed to make this repair work possible: The Colonial Dames of America, the Daughters of 1812, the Daughters of American Colonists, the Daughters of the American Revolution and the Sons of the Revolution.



Survey Body Joins Middies at Mess

Board of Visitors Studies Navy Academy Classes.

Annapolis, Md., April 24 (Spl.).—A dinner given tonight by Rear Admiral Thomas C. Hart, superintendent of the Naval Academy, climaxed a day of much activity on the part of the official board of visitors, which yesterday began the annual survey of the institution.

During the forenoon the four committees detailed to facilitate the inspections went about their task. They visited the class rooms in the several academic departments and gained an insight into methods employed in teaching Uncle Sam's future sea commanders, after which they took luncheon with the midshipmen in the mess room of Bancroft Hall.

This brought together a number of the middies and the Senators and Representatives by whom they were appointed to the academy.

In the afternoon, the official party observed the midshipmen in demonstrations of practical work, such as seamanship and navigation, ordnance and gunnery, and other phases of their professional training.

Charleston, W. Va., April 24 (Spl.).—The Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia today ruled that "a certificate for shares of stock in a corporation is not subject to attachment except in connection with a levy directly on the shares of stock."

The ruling came in reversing action of the Richie County Circuit Court directing an issue out of chancery to determine ownership of stock in a suit by J. W. Kennedy against Waldsee Prunty and others.

Madison, Va., April 24 (Spl.).—Ernest Jenkins, 27, surrendered to Madison County authorities here yesterday, following the fatal shooting Sunday night of Wayman Sisk, 23, near Nethers, on the border of Rappahannock and Madison Counties in the Blue Ridge Mountains.

Jenkins went to Washington, Va., and engaged Frank Moffett, Commonwealth's attorney, to defend him, then came to Madison.

According to his story, he, with his wife, mother, and several others, came upon Sisk lying by the road drunk. Sisk attacked him with knives. 'Fanatical Nationalism' Hit As Zionist Conference Closes

Rabbi Israel, Baltimore, Raps 'Revisionists' in Church Ranks.

Richmond, April 24 (Spl.).—A stirring address by Rabbi Edward L. Israel, of Baltimore, denouncing "fanatical nationalism" closed the twelfth annual conference of the Seaboard Zionist Region here yesterday.

Rabbi Isreal also spoke of the formation within Zionist organizations of a dissident group called "revisionists," which he said world Zionists had repudiated.

The conference, which opened Sunday, was attended by more than 160 delegates from Eastern seaboard States. Among the main problems considered were plans for launching a $3,000,000 Nation-wide campaign for the United Jewish Appeal, and the underwriting by the region of a purchase of a tract of land in Xfar (colony) Ussishkin, Palestine, to be named for the Seaboard region.

Yesterday's session was devoted to the Hadassah, with Mrs. William Saxon, president of the Seaboard Regional Unit, presiding, and to the Junior Hadassah, headed by Miss Rose L. Green Named On Maryland Planning Board

Kensington Man Succeeds Cissel, of Silver Spring, Who Resigned.

Appointment of Richard F. Green, Kensington, Md., president of the Farmers Banking and Trust Co., to succeed J. Herbert Cissel, of Silver Spring, as a member of the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission was announced yesterday.

Mr. Cissel, president of the Silver Spring National Bank and of the Silver Spring Building & Supply Co., declined to comment on his resignation, which was forwarded to Gov. Albert C. Ritchie several days ago. It is understood, however, that it was because of pressure of his business interests.

Mr. Green, who was indorsed by the Democratic organization of Montgomery County, will serve until May, 1937, when Mr. Cissel's term expires. He is 50 years old and has lived at Kensington about 30 years, moving there from his native town, Leesburg, Va.

He was connected with the Donaldson Dental Manufacturing Co. of Washington until he went into the Kensington branch of the Farmers Bank, where he subsequently became cashier and manager. He later was elected chairman of the board of directors of the main office in Rockville and was elected president when State Senator Robert G. Hilton resigned in 1933.

Mr. Green is an active member of the Kensington Chamber of Commerce, a past master of the Kensington Lodge of Masons, and served five years as a member of the Kensington Town Council. He has one son, Winship I. Green, manager of the Griffith & Perry Coal Co. in Silver Spring.

DEALER ADVERTISEMENT

CHEVROLET When you pay the price of a Knee-Action car, you naturally want genuine Knee-Action and all that goes with it. You want the new gliding ride at its smoothest, safest, and best. You want simple, foolproof, and trouble-proof construction—the huskiest, sturdiest front-end you can buy. And, of course, you want shock-proof steering—it is the natural companion of the gliding ride. You pay for these things, and you want them all—but you can get them, in the low-price field, only from Chevrolet. The reason is simple. Fully-enclosed Knee-Action wheels are costly to build—so costly that only Chevrolet, world's largest builder of cars, can afford to make the necessary huge investment in new machinery—and still keep prices among the lowest of the low. Only Chevrolet has the resources and the assured volume of sales that permit this extra production cost. Chevrolet does it because Chevrolet believes that, to KEEP ON SELLING THE MOST CARS, YOU MUST KEEP ON BUILDING THE BEST. And judging from the popularity of the 1934 car, America agrees with Chevrolet.

The First Ball.

This greeting the baseball season in Washington is getting to be a chore. We tried to do it when the first game was to be played—and then it wasn't! Yesterday President Roosevelt went to the ball park and, while 30,000 persons cheered, he tossed out the first ball. Only it wasn't really the first ball. The Senators had been playing nearly a week and had got themselves into the unenviable position of next to the last in the list. It is beginning to look pretty dark.

A week ago yesterday, when the season should have officially started here with the band playing and all that, what happened? It rained. Then the Washington team went to Boston, and what happened? Well, from the first game on nothing very pleasant. Then yesterday the postponed opener was played here. All morning Washington basked in the warm and pleasant sun of springtide and then went expectantly to the ball park. The "first" ball was thrown, the flag run up, and all the ceremonies attended to without which (and, in this case, with which) no Washington opener is a success. And so what happened? With the score 0 to 0 at the end of the third inning it rained. All of which was pretty dampening to the enthusiasm of the fans.

But after the ball park and the spectators had been wet down sufficiently the game went on to a finish and another victory for Boston. All in all the poor Senators have had a rather sorry opening week. But anyway, the season has opened officially, the ceremonies have been gone through, the platitudes spoken. From now on baseball will be left to the tender care of the sports department unless this damp start should send the Washington team sprouting up to first place and the pennant. In that case, the false start will be forgiven.

Labor Takes A Hand.

Labor's vital interest in securing a constructive rather than a destructive securities act is manifested by the decision of the president of the A. F. of L. to place that statute under scrutiny from the worker's viewpoint. Mr. Green recognizes that any measure which obstructs the flow of capital into industry will operate to augment unemployment. The jobless can not be relieved in any real sense of the word until there is recovery in basic industry. Consequently, the heaviest burdens resulting from this restrictive measure, and threatened by the industrial-control features of the stock market bill, fall upon the unemployed.

Mr. Green's decision to investigate the effect of the securities act on employment follows closely upon complaints from the NRA committee for heavy industry. Chairman Houston says that "reemployment is being blocked by the presence of laws which choke the flow of money and credit into business and by proposed bills that go even further in that direction." A large part of those now without jobs are usually employed in construction and other basic industries. Work for them will not be in sight until these pursuits can be revived. And testimony from business, industrial and financial leaders throughout the country indicates that such a revival can not be expected as long as the emphasis is on making regulatory legislation unworkable.

The study undertaken by the American Federation of Labor will be especially interesting because that organization properly favors truly effective safeguards for the investing public. In some quarters there is now apparent a palpable effort to discredit the cogent arguments of business and industrial leaders by appeals to mob psychology. To be logical the cry of "Wall street lobby" should now be directed against the A. F. of L. In the minds of some the accusation appears applicable to all who wish to see industrial recovery, and consequent reemployment.

Fire To Fight Fire.

The bloody scenes recently enacted in the streets of Vienna, the Paris street fighting, and the latest demonstrations in Madrid are at least in part manifestations of opposition to the spread of Fascism. These sporadic encounters with police and soldiers, in which Socialists have figured conspicuously, are not to be dismissed as organized uprisings against the forces of law and order. They are, at least in part, popular movements originating in fears that dictatorships will sweep away the representative governmental institutions which alone protect individual rights and liberties.

Enemies of constituted authority may be found in the ranks of the European Socialist parties. But they are at least equally prevalent among those who stage Fascist demonstrations such as that held in London under the leadership of Sir Oswald Mosley. The devotion to the Crown proclaimed by Sir Oswald will not insure tame submission to Fascist decrees by men who place their faith in parliamentary government, although Sir Oswald hopes that Great Britain will adopt Fascism without violence. He forgets that if violence and social disorder sometimes lead to Fascism, the unwelcome threat of Fascist rule may equally incite to social disorder and violence.

The Army Bans Lobbying.

As a result of recent investigations into charges of manipulation in War Department contracts, a ruling has been made that hereafter no concern may sell to that department unless it is willing to swear it utilizes only normal selling agencies.

This action is as commendable as it is unusual, and will be hailed by all who share in the growing anxiety over the insidious influence on military expenditure exercised by arms manufacturers of one kind or another. Although the order deals primarily with automotive equipment, it is expected to be extended to the purchase of $7,500,000 worth of airplanes soon to be purchased through PWA funds. In this latter instance it will be hitting more directly at certain of the evils into which Senator Nye's committee will inquire when it begins its investigation of the manufacture and sale of armaments and munitions.

Even if this ruling were extended to include all purchases by the Army, and even if the Navy Department should adopt a similar ruling, few would be so naive as to believe it would end the armaments lobby. But it should provide a very useful check. In the recent investigation of Army bids the grand jury failed to hand down indictments, though the employment of lobbyists and political lawyers on a large scale is said to have been disclosed. Certainly armament firms will be less likely to engage such agents if they have to take oath that none but their own bona fide salesmen have been employed. Profits made by lobbying tactics would hardly offset the harm that would be done by the exposure that would follow proved violation of the oath.

Those who doubt the lengths to which some manufacturers will go for the sake of profit in wartime and during peace will do well to examine two books just published. "Iron, Blood and Profits," by Gilbert Seldes (Harpers), and "Merchants of Death," by H. C. Engelbrecht and F. C. Hanighen (Dodd, Mead & Co.), supply documented evidence of activities of this type. The studies add detail to the startling outline of facts given by Senator Borah in his speech of March 5, made shortly before the passage of the Vinson "treaty-navy" act.

These volumes explain, among other matters, how munition makers have spread war propaganda, how they have maintained sabotage lobbies to make disarmament efforts abortive, how they have aided patriotic societies without the knowledge of many of their members. Neither Seldes nor Engelbrecht and Hanighen fall into the easy error of assuming that the various arms lobbies are the only causes of war, although they assert, as Sir Edward Grey has charged, that they are the main cause.

The self-regulatory effort of the War Department to resist lobbying is a short but praiseworthy step in the direction of ending this intolerable evil. It is a tacit admission on the part of the Army that lobbyists are always active, whether in the interest of sales of munitions, or merely auto trucks for its transportation.

Inferiority Complex?

Judge John M. Woolsey's decision, allowing publication in the United States of James Joyce's masterpiece, "Ulysses," was widely hailed for the enlightened opinion which it was. But New York's Federal attorney, Martin Conboy, now seeks again to have the book banned. In appealing Judge Woolsey's ruling he says the book "fairly reeks" with obscenity. Any one with a mature mind knows this is utter nonsense, and no one whose mind was not mature would have the patience to read far enough into the book to find those passages which Mr. Conboy insists are corrupting.

Whatever the results of the appeal, two things will remain certain. James Joyce's book will remain the classic that it is, and Judge Woolsey's decision will remain an utterance of outstanding insight among such judgments as jurists have handed down, over a lengthy period, on serious books too lightly called "obscene." Nothing that any district attorney can do will alter those facts.

Just why the district attorney should have felt it necessary to take an appeal is not apparent. But then most acts of censorship are irrational. The most obvious explanation is that the old inferiority complex is involved. The effort is to debase all literary appreciation to the level which appeals to the censor. Boston was laughed out of this practice five years ago. But there are some who will never learn that censorship serves no other purpose than to advertise the very books which the authorities would keep hidden from the public gaze.

An Aid To Prosperity.

An official in charge of research and development for one of the country's large corporations says that the average American's craving for luxury is and always has been an important factor contributing to our National prosperity. The idea that a taste for luxuries leads to the creation of wealth may seem paradoxical, and undoubtedly the statement is only a half truth. Nevertheless, it has an important bearing upon our industrial future.

Too many despairing references have been made during the depression to an alleged lack of profitable openings for capital employment. It is encouraging to be reminded that luxury-loving Americans have a tremendous capacity for discovering better ways of satisfying their primary needs and inventing new wants that soon come to be regarded as essential.

A nation has to acquire wealth before it can properly cultivate a taste for luxuries. But after a solid economic foundation has been laid, the imaginative faculty which creates new desires gives an impetus for constant expansion that otherwise would be lacking.

A Blatant Performance.

A one-man rampage in the House has blocked the old-age pension bill. Representative Blanton, of Abilene, Tex., frustrated all action for or against the measure by a filibuster devoted principally to wisecracking and irrelevancies. This important legislation was denied even the courtesy of intelligent opposition.

In her opening statement to the House Chairman Norton of the District Committee explained the attitude of Representative Blanton to this bill. She said, as reported verbatim by the Congressional Record:

> This certain member who objected to the bill came to me and the reason he gave me for objecting—and please bear this in mind—was that he did not have any such law in his State and that as it was a Congressional year, and he was coming up for election it would probably put him in a very embarrassing position there . . .
> Does any member of this House think that is a fair reason for depriving the old people of the District of Columbia of a pension bill? Does any member of the House think that is the proper procedure? I can not believe it. I want to know if this House is going to support the members who have worked very faithfully on District matters, or if it is possible that one member can frustrate the work that we are trying to do?

The Representative from Texas did not deny this statement. He admitted that he favors the principle of old age pensions. In an unguarded moment of candor he even confessed: "I have been voting for so many things in this Congress that I have been taught against ever since my childhood that I have gotten all mixed up." Yet he alone was permitted to strangle this important bill by a display of stubborn and unreasoning verbosity.

For many years Representative Blanton has demonstrated that he has little interest in the problems of the National Capital. He seems to take positive enjoyment in interfering with the conduct of District government, perhaps with the view of attracting favorable notice among his constituents in Texas. In this respect his attacks are unfortunately not unique. The surprising thing is that a legislative chamber composed of 435 members would allow an important bill to be pushed aside by a campaign speech from a Representative seeking reelection.

Filibustering is sufficiently undesirable when questions of principle are involved. It becomes a far more vicious practice when indulged in to foster political aspirations. Performances like that of Monday reflect discredit upon the entire House in addition to penalizing the people of Washington.

Our Traffic Problem.

Washingtonians are accustomed to periodical flurries over the parking problem. Citizens become wrought up over the congestion of traffic and officials devise some new experiment or inaugurate minor changes that appear to ameliorate conditions temporarily. Then the furore dies down and very little is done until another avalanche of protests is unloosed.

Just now there is much talk of forbidding all-night parking throughout the city. The Traffic Department has discovered that Washington has garage space to accommodate 86 per cent of the registered automobiles. Citizens are being asked, through a questionnaire, whether they desire removal of all cars from the streets at night, as if the problem were entirely academic.

Before automobiles can be removed from the streets it is obvious that suitable parking space must be available. The estimate that 86 per cent of all Washington cars could be housed in existing garages is misleading. Some localities have more than enough facilities to accommodate cars belonging to residents, but in other sections there is an acute lack of off-street parking space. Obviously an overnight parking place a few miles away from one's home is of no value whatever. Moreover, the great majority of automobiles which are in operation every day require two spaces in which to park—one in the residential section and the other in or near the business area. And thousands of tourists' cars must be taken care of, especially in the summer time. It is futile to talk of forbidding overnight parking with our present lack of facilities.

Washington's traffic problem ought not to be minimized. In some sections congestion has become acute. Instead of superficial remedies that would impose hardships upon many citizens, the city needs some comprehensive planning extended to its entire traffic system. Mere parking restrictions will not suffice, especially if they are unreasonable. While local authorities are talking about abolition of all downtown parking, the Government is building immense structures in the Triangle without garage facilities.

It is time for action on the constructive side. Rerouting of street car lines and improved service, or the eventual construction of subways may be necessary. Certainly, something more than further parking restrictions ought to be considered.

A Parade of the Past From the Files of The Post.

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY.

THE AMERICAN consulate at Nuevo Laredo was set on fire by federal soldiers. Also the American guard at the international bridge was fired upon by Mexican troopers, who were forced to retire when the Americans returned the fire. President Wilson announced that this Government had accepted offers of mediation with a view to settling our differences with Mexico. The mediators were Brazil, the Argentine Republic and Chile.

TEN YEARS AGO TODAY.

SAMUEL GOMPERS, president of the American Federation of Labor, attacked anti-trust laws as "obstructive to the development of the great and humane resources of our country." He advocated "industrial democracy" in which labor would have a voice in establishing the conditions surrounding its employment.

The District Liquor Law.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: One of the first acts of the Seventy-third Congress was to pass a District Liquor Law which was deemed to be a model for the whole Nation. This law specifically states that a license should not be granted for at least two weeks after date of application, to give property owners who live within a radius of 600 feet of the proposed place of business a chance to protest the granting of such license. If 51 per cent of such property owners objected the license would not be granted.

That is the law and here are the facts. In this section of Southeast Washington, i. e. the 1300 block, we have had for all time a remarkably well-behaved and peaceable neighborhood and it has been considered a desirable section in which to live.

Immediately after this "model liquor law" was set up, a newcomer applied for a Class D license at 1330 Pennsylvania avenue southeast. The A. B. C. board dug up a city ordinance, which had been enacted many years ago and granted a license to the applicant in spite of the protests of about 90 per cent of the property owners and residents of this section.

There are about 200 homes within a radius of 600 feet, worth on an average of from $5,000 to $9,000. Because of the promiscuous drinking, cursing, hoodlooism and all other conditions that go with such an institution, our homes have depreciated at least 20 per cent in value. The District assessor should recognize this and act according, when time comes for appraising our property.

C. G. DEGMAN.
Washington, April 9.

Editorial note: In fairness to the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, The Post has made inquiry from that organization regarding the charges in the above letter. We have obtained the following information:

The particular license to which Mr. Degman referred is a retailer's Class "D" license, for an establishment located at the corner of Pennsylvania avenue and G street southeast. The license Class "D" gives to the holder thereof the privilege of selling light wine and beer by the drink—on the premises. Mr. Degman, mistaking it, refers to the provisions of subdivision C of paragraph 5 of section 14 of the alcoholic beverage control act. A radius of 600 feet of this proposed place indicated that by far the great majority of the property in the vicinity was zoned first commercial, which made unavailing the provisions of the section in question.

Mr. Degman appeared in opposition to the license with a very large petition signed by the surrounding neighbors. It developed at the hearing that some of those who had signed did so under a mistaken idea that what was requested was a license to establish a saloon, or at least a place that would sell all forms of liquor in addition to light wine and beer. When the question of this mistake was presented to the A. B. C. B. an inspector was sent to make a survey of the neighborhood, to explain which license was requested, and to obtain an impartial return of the ideas of those who lived within 600 feet of the proposed establishment. The license was granted, as the return indicated that a small majority of the residents favored its issuance.

Post's Philatelic Column.

Human Race Degeneration.

To the Editor the The Post—Sir: A story appeared in a local paper of April 11 headed "Kidnaped by Boy; Girl, Age 2, Succumbs; a 13-year-old Confesses Keeping Child Two Days in Crumbling Attic." The boy has a police record for molesting little girls. It should not take the juvenile authorities long to decide the best and safest way in a case of this kind. This boy as well as thousands of others who are oversexed and vicious, along with the diseased and insane, should be sterilized, thus cutting down the horrible crimes committed by them. Why should a nation foster offspring by the weak mentally and physically?

We need our strength and money to care for the fit, and not squander it on insane asylums, jails and reformatories. Let's spend it on schools and homes. Sterilization would take down the birth rate of the unfit and bring down our taxes for institutions. We breed only the best stock, but allow the human race to degenerate into animals of the lowest type. MR. X.

Advcoates Preparedness.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Japan is stirring up a hell-pot in the Far East and the sooner that fact is realized and acted upon by this country the better. Instead of withdrawing our fleet from the Pacific Ocean we should be sending fighting airships and submarines over there as fast as we can build them and be ready to meet any sudden and unethical attack by this menacing nation.

When the Japanese are ready they will strike without any war declaration or advance notice. They are war-mad and ambitious to seize all of China.

We should arrange with Russia immediately to bring up her army and airplanes and then compel Japan to get entirely out of China and everybody else do the same and let the Chinese people regulate their own affairs. If we had a few thousand airships ready for a quick hop to Tokyo and in Manchuria this could be done. It is a big mistake to leave our Pacific Coast unguarded at this time.

Modesty Compels Censorship.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Who wrote your editorials on nudism? They were fine. I notice that the leading editorial is likely to be very good. It has a lightness of touch with more thread than the ——. When the —— goes in for cultured wit, it is as jerky as the blind staggers. The Post has dignity without ponderosity, which the —— seldom attains. Indeed, I think you have charming editorial writers.

Morality and Law.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Would you please a little girl by publishing these lines, asking all the Senators and Representatives from Nevada to return there until they can make respectable laws that will not disgrace our flag and our beautiful Capitol. They have spoilt the environment of this Capital City of the whole United States by their presence. I have lost my happy home by those wicked men making it easy for Dad to get a flapper and send mother away without a cause. A LITTLE GIRL.

Mr. Meyer's Address.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The address delivered by Mr. Eugene Meyer last night before the American Society of Newspaper Editors should be taken as the platform of a newly formed American party to which sane Democrats and sane Republicans would flock.

These sane but bewildered adherents to both major parties have been thinking along these lines for some time. Here we have their sentiments voiced clearly and plainly with none of those cooing inflections peculiar to political orators.

While all of it is invaluable, one expression of Mr. Meyer should be framed and hung in every schoolhouse in the land and, as a part of the regular morning routine, the children should repeat, after their salute to the American flag, these words: "We believe that individual initiative is essential to progress"—"exercised not at the expense but in the interests of others."

Mr. Meyer's reference to Jonathan Swift's agricultural admonition is most timely. I would recommend it also as a textbook, preceded by the biblical admonition, "The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof." The world and they that dwell therein could, at a fraction of the expense of the past year's experimental orgy, have been fed and clothed through "a better working of the machinery of distribution, not a curtailment of the aggregate product," thereby strengthening our National structure and building up international fraternity, understanding and cooperation.

The Cherry Blossom Parade.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: While quite agreeing with you in your idea that there was too much emphasis placed on the military in yesterday's parade (and about half of said military consisted of high school cadets, so even that effect was spoiled), what would there be left of the parade if the military units had been taken out? I saw about 20 floats, instead of the 50 or more credited by the newspapers. The parade took little more than an hour to pass.

Now as to the purpose of the parade. It was to be, as the whole festival is meant to be, an occasion of peace offering and well wishes toward the Japanese. It is as futile a gesture as one nation ever made toward another. What kind of parades do the Japanese hold in our favor? My prediction is that we will be sorry Admiral Perry ever visited those islands, and when we are through with that nation we will wish we had sent those trees back to Japan long ago.

Working Wives.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your correspondent, Miss E. Brands, has a case when she argues against the holding of jobs by married women whose husbands are also employed. But there is a case for the opposition, too.

In these days the combined wages of employed husband and wife are often insufficient to provide for the family—and unmarried women don't, generally, have children, whereas married women are nearly always at least what I may call "likely mothers."

If married women are clever at housework—which is a trade as much as any other kind of work—then housework may suffice. If they have been otherwise trained, why should they not work along the line of least resistance: i. e., the line in which they have been trained? In theory, at least, the answer is obvious: there should be enough jobs to go around.

Hi-Spy—And Low.

Postoffice, Wednesday.

Recognize this?

Paris.—According to the police, the young American accused of participating in activities of an international spy-syndicate added to his earlier disclosures today . . .

Well, maybe not today. But about once a week now you can read something like that in any newspaper. For about once a week, those police issue new fuel for their new spy-fire. Be the "young American" really involved or really innocent, the symbolic figure of The Spy has definitely reentered the news. In Finland a University of Michigan graduate has been sentenced to the five years of hard labor which he presumbaly escaped at Ann Arbor.

And, away back in murky March, we predicted much this sort of return. Whittier believed that:

Of all sad words of tongue or pen
The saddest are "It might have been."

We reply:

Of all the gladsome words we know
The gladdest are "We told you so."

People still picture the governmental spy as furnished with unlimited funds that he spends as he pleases. As a matter of fact, his wages are wretchedly low, for the risk he runs. His Government is always nagging him to reduce expenditures. His expense-bills, when he can render any, are scrutinized through the spectacles of suspicion, are slashed with the most efficient of blue-pencils.

People still think of the spy as commissioned only to secure drafts of secret treaties, to purloin plans of secret submarines. As often as not, the loot he is sent to steal is data of a quite commercial nature, and sometimes he is asked to endanger his freedom for the whim of somebody in power.

At this moment, there are spies of certain European countries working in certain other European countries to discover certain industrial processes. During the World War, a Royal Personage wanted, and almost secured, a woman that we knew to convey a trivial personal message to a semi-prisoner Personage in a city occupied by the enemy.

Nor are spies always actuated by patriotism. Before 1914, Europe's ablest patriotic spy was the representative of revolutionists in a province seeking liberation from the Government which then controlled it. The Peace Treaty provided the liberty; the new, or "restored," nation soon made him its Minister of Foreign Affairs. But he was one of the exceptions. Most professional spies are in the business because they can't find any other, or because they like double-dealing. Many of the lesser spies are not nationals of the countries employing them.

However, whether an "agent" works for his own country or another, all excuses are barred. There is only one test: "Does he succeed?"

A young enthusiast volunteered for the British military secret service late in 1914. It was finally decided to send him to Berlin. Before he left, he was to have an interview with his idol, Kitchener.

Kitchener never looked up from his desk. He pushed some papers toward the lad:

"Here are your credentials and instructions. Learn the latter. Then burn them. And, if you can't get what we want, don't come back."

Occasionally, a spy gets more than is asked. For instance:

A while ago, one of the inquisitive neighbors of a great European power commissioned a clever woman-spy to secure the plans of a new miniature machine-gun. Two such guns were being tried-out not far from the frontier.

Just at mess-time, when one gun had been tried and packed, an automobile, conducted by two ladies, stopped in some difficulties on the road beside that lonely field chosen for a testing-place: one enormously fat and homely lady, one slim and lovely. Officers wanted to help. Simple soldiers gaped. Water? The officers would get it from that stream crossing the field. But the unattractive lady had already started there, so all the military remained around the slim goddess. Within a minute, stout Hebe waddled back with the water. She was so fat that the officers could scarcely suppress their smiles as they hoisted her into the car.

Indeed, she must have been extraordinarily heavy, for, as they discovered after her departure, she had hidden somewhere about her the tested machine-gun.

There is a degree of politeness among competing spies, outside working-hours. During the Great War, nearly all the spies in Geneva, which was full of them, used to lunch at one hotel. Technical enemies did not share tables, but they always bowed to one another and exchanged greetings. Among them was at least one American spy—for a while.

We first met him not long ago in his native New York. He is now a well-known business-man there. We had no suspicion of his previous occupation, but we happened to mention Geneva.

"I visited Geneva for some months, when I was in the service, during the war," said he.

"Where," we inquired casually, "did you live?"

"Most of the time," he answered, "in St. Antoine."

St. Antoine is the city-jail. It was no rare thing for enemy spies to trump up an extraordinarily good case of theft against any too promising rival.

Along the Potomac

With Carlisle Bargeron

WALL STREET must feel right silly after plotting to weaken Mr. Roosevelt by removing that great pillar of strength, Speaker Rainey, to learn that he is really no support at all.

I take it that Wall Street was engaged in this sinister plot because the Speaker, himself, said so. Yes, sir, he announced very solemnly on the eve of his recent primary contest that the malefactors of great wealth were pouring money into his district against him, aiming not so much at him personally, but at the President. Such foolishness on the part of the malefactors as I have never seen. Indeed, it was a regular orgy of foolishness, a Belshazzer's feast of it.

BARGERON.

* * * *

There was never a time when I considered the Speaker a supporter of the President. He did agree with his program, but even then you could not accurately describe him as a supporter. Without looking in the dictionary I imagine a supporter is something that supports, in other words holds up, something on which an object may lean. Surely Mr. Roosevelt has never leaned on the Speaker. It would be a right uncertain support.

As a matter of fact, it develops now that the Speaker can not be said even to be with the President. It is most difficult, indeed, to imagine how two men could be farther apart than they are on two major measures pending before Congress, the McLeod bill to pay off the depositors of closed banks and the matter of silver. I am inclined to think, in fact, that the Speaker is more of a nuisance to than a supporter of the President. And just to think that Wall Street should seek to weaken the Chief Executive by plotting against the Speaker. Really, Wall Street must have been crazy.

* * * *

Why, in the past two or three days there have been reports that the Administration might remove Mr. Rainey from the Speakership, that it figured it needed a more capable Speaker in the next Congress with the majority which the Democrats now have perhaps considerably whittled down. This being the case it is obvious that he can't be considered the pillar of strength that Wall Street thought. Any money that it poured into his district, even if it was only 2 cents, was under the circumstances what one might fairly term a most reckless expenditure, an utter lack of appreciation of the worth of money, of its value as a medium of exchange.

The Wirt charges were funny, but not as much so as the plot against the Speaker. That, in my opinion, will stand a long time as one of the funniest things in the world.

* * * *

What a joke it is on Wall Street! The funniest part of it is that in some particular alley of its sinister endeavor it must have run smack into the Administration's attitude. Imagine its surprise!

Here it was now sneaking around in the darkness of night, its evil pursuit not daring to risk the light of day, when of a sudden it was surprised by the appearance of the Administration with the demand of "hands-up." Too late to run. There it was, caught like a mouse in a trap. The only thing to do was to confess and face the music.

"What are you doing?" demanded the captor. "Come on, no beating around the bush; what have you got in that bag?"

Then the frightened, whining voice of the captive:

"The jig is up. We were plotting to weaken the President by removing Speaker Rainey."

"Ho, ho, that is rich. Go right ahead."

How ridiculous Wall Street then must have felt to be left right there in the alley with the Administration laughing so hard that it awoke up sleepers all over the neighborhood.

Milk-Cows Fail In Ox Team Job

Farmer's Duty Dodge Idea Seems Like Good One, But Collapses.

Greve, Mont. (U.P.).—Frank O'Connell, a Canadian farmer, had an idea that he thought would enable him to escape duty payments when he moved his dairy herd to the United States—but it didn't work.

Things weren't going so well as they might on the O'Connell farm near Mankato, Sask., so the farmer decided to move to Montana.

He notified customs officials he was coming across the international boundary near here and invited inspection. The officers found O'Connell and his impedimenta near Greve.

The "impedimenta" consisted of two four-cow teams hitched to wagons, a two-cow team yoked to a mowing machine, and a two-cow team dragging a hay rake.

Piled atop the wagon were beds, personal effects, household articles, a sewing machine, a sleigh and a cream separator.

The customs agents examined the lot and told O'Connell he could enter this country—but that he must pay duty on the cows because they were milkers.

"Oh, no I don't," said the immigrant, "they are beasts of burden and therefore are duty-free. Can't you see, I've used my cows for teams?" Official inspection of customs laws revealed beasts of burden actually were duty free.

However, the customs officials investigated and found that O'Connell allegedly had driven almost 50 miles via truck, and when he was within 300 yards of the line, had hitched his cows to the wagons. While the officials were debating, several of the cows dropped in their traces, as a result of exhaustion.

That clinched the argument. "You pay duty. Those are milk cows, not teams," the officials warned.

Suit Over Chimney Costs County $62

Greensburg, Pa. (U.P.).—Westmoreland County would have done well to pay Martha Helton $1 to fix her chimney, even though the county had nothing to do with its damage.

Martha, who lives in New Kensington, had Michael Faye and Joseph Platt arrested for malicious mischief when the two tried to smoke her out of her rented house. She said they damaged the chimney to the extent of $1. The men were released, but the county will have to pay $62.50 costs because nobody was to blame and the costs have to be paid by some one.

King's 'Friend' Talks Britons Out of Savings

Glib-Tongued "Con Man" Is Unmasked After Big Swindle.

London (U.P.).—Credulous villagers of Wenhaston, near Southwold, in Suffolk, are gazing ruefully at depleted bank accounts, and Scotland Yard is searching for the perpetrator of the most fantastic swindle of recent years.

A dark, handsome stranger descended on the peaceful Southwold district with a story that any self-respecting American "con man" would shame to relate. A number of the villagers swallowed the story, and begged for more.

Maj. Leonard T. Crane, K. M., C. B. E., was the title the engaging stranger assumed for his operations. The first initials mean that he was a king's messenger, and the other that the king had made him a commander of the British Empire.

Dishonored Check.

Crane asserted that a check of his for a mere £350 had been dishonored by a joint stock bank. So incensed was the major over this business that he threatened the bank with proceedings. The bank became frightened, he claimed and offered a paltry few thousand pounds in settlement.

Then the bank's offer grew until it got in the millions. But by this time, the major claimed, the crown had become aware of the situation. And the crown had no liking for this particular bank, because it had not dealt in war loan securities during the war. So with the King's active assistance, said Crane, the bank was offering more than £100,000,000 to hush the matter up.

Of this imposing sum, King George was due to receive personally some £35,000,000. Crane's share, he claimed, amounted to £43,000,000, out of which he was going to present each of the persons who temporarily financed him with £500,000. And, of course, he had numerous, important-looking documents to prove his assertions. He got £5,000 from the villagers.

King's Signature.

Some of these papers bore the alleged signature of the King himself, and others the names of highly priced members of the judiciary. So convincing were the documents displayed by Crane that his dupes believed him the intimate friend of kings, judges and bank presidents.

So strong was this belief in Crane that Mrs. Duke, the daughter of a local hotel owner, promised to marry him, although she was already married and living apart from her husband. That could be easily fixed, Crane told her. He would just have his friend Lord Merrivale, president of the divorce court, attend to the matter.

Special License.

A few days later, the major turned up with a divorce decree for Mrs. Duke, signed "Merrivale." He also brought with him a special license which he said had been issued by a consistory court. It was this document that led to Crane's unmasking. The local parson refused to act upon the license. Inquiries were started and Crane disappeared.

Investigations revealed that Crane was really David P. Caprice, once a bricklayer, and more recently traveler for a contracting firm. He had no titles nor decorations, nor any other claims to fame beyond his extremely vivid imagination and plausible manner.

Milk Declared Public Utility by Legislature

Salem, Oreg. (U.P.).—By action of the recent Legislature, milk is now a public utility in Oregon cities of 15,000 populaiton or more. A State milk commission has authority to regulate supplies and distribution of milk in such cities, attempting to protect best interests of producers, distributers and consumers.

A bill declaring gasoline a public utility when its price exceeded 18 cents a gallon failed to pass the Legislature.

The Once Over

TAMMANY HALL HIAWATHA.
("Tammany Hall Ousts Boss John F. Curry."—headline.)

By the shore of Gitche-Gumee,
By the shining Big-Sea-Water,
At the doorway of the wigwam
In the pleasant April morning
Ja-Nef-Curry stood and waited.
Bright above him shone the Heavens,
Level spread the land before him
Devastated by the foemen,
Not a stalk of corn left standing.

* * * *

Through the rifted leaves and branches,
O'er the broken, empty prairie
Something in the hazy distance,
Something in the mists of morning,
Loomed and lifted, showing figures,
Figures lean and hungry looking,
Coming nearer, nearer, nearer,
Never stopping, never halting.

* * * *

Then the weary battered chieftain
Cried aloud and spake in this wise:
"Beautiful the sun, Oh, strangers,
When you journey here to see me!
All that's here in peace awaits you,
All my doors stand open to you,
You shall enter in my wigwam;
Though I know not what you bring me,
I will show you I can take it."

* * * *

Then the venerable leader
Seated them on skins of bison,
Seated them on skins of ermine;
Skins that told of former glories,
Skins that now were full of mothballs;
Brought them food in bowls of basswood
(Hard-boiled eggs with bread and water)—
Brought them pipes and brought them matches,
Brought them lights, but no tobacco.

* * * *

Now the warriors Ken-Nea-Ly,
Doo-Ling, Kelly, Big Chief A-Hearn,
Jih-Mee-Hines and Big Chief Cul-Kin,
Bowed and whispered gently, "Brother,
We shall bury now the hatchet;"
Saying so, they quickly did it,
Burying it with swift precision
Where the feathers they were thickest,
Right between the ears they hid it.

* * * *

And they said, "Farewell, forever!"
Said, "Farewell, Oh, Ja-Nef-Curry!" . . .
From the forests dark and lonely
Came the laughter of Jim-Farley,
Came a chortle from the White House.
Thus departed Ja-Nef-Curry,
From the Wigwam-by-the-River
To the Isles of Wrong Decisions,
To the Hills of Faulty Judgment,
To the Land of Wretched Guesses,
To the Vale of Lost Elections.

DISTURBING THOUGHT.

Many a father these days is haunted by a fear his little baby daughter will grow up to look like a moving picture heroine.

DODGING THE DRY SPOTS.

Elmer Twitchell went into the diner on a New Haven Road train the other day and thought it would be nice to have a cocktail.

"May I get a Martini, dry?" he asked the waiter.

"Yessah!" was the answer. But presently the waiter returned, pointed out the window and said, "I'm sorry, boss, but it's too late."

"Why?" demanded Elmer.

"We was jest crossin' Porchester when you got thirsty," explained the waiter.

He tipped Elmer off, however, that if he stayed on the train there would be a brief interval between Thompsonville and Springfield when he could get it. Whereupon it dawned on Elmer for the first time that Admiral Byrd had a good reason for choosing seven months' solitude in Little America.

Europe's Radio Tangle Worse After Treaty

Many Stations Refuse to Accept Wave Lengths Assigned Them.

London (U.P.).—A tangle of radio wave lengths stretches across the whole of Europe today.

Programs from Berlin come in and intermingle discordantly with the same waves as Rome and Berlin. Listeners here get as many as three stations at a time. Jazz, chamber music and opera are all right by themselves, but together they sound like nothing on earth, radio owners declare.

The cause of the gigantic traffic jam of the ether is the Lucerne agreement. According to this, most of the stations in Europe should have changed over to new wavelengths at 11 p. m., Sunday, January 15. The waves had been carefully selected by international experts as most likely to keep the stations apart.

Many Ignored Pact.

The trouble was, however, that many of the continental broadcasting stations ignored the agreement altogether, and so far have shown no intention whatever of changing over to the new waves.

The results were soon felt. Daventry National had changed from 200 kc. to 203 kc. When it opened up Monday morning, it was immediately and violently heterodyned by the powerful Eiffel Tower station, which, under the agreement, should have closed down on the Sunday night.

French officials, questioned by annoyed British listeners, declared that Eiffel Tower might eventually be used for military purposes—Morse only—but for the next few months at least it would continue to broadcast on its old wave length of 1,446 meters. Thus Daventry National will continue to be howled down.

Ox Can't Plow if You Feed Him Poison Weeds

By Robert Quillen

A shrewd politician of another generation made it his business to remember, or seem to remember, everybody he met. When memory failed him, he saved his face by enquiring sympathetically: "How is the old trouble?"

Almost everybody who has reached maturity has some ailment. In one way or another he is below par. He isn't a good animal. And as a rule there is nothing the matter with him that common sense couldn't cure. His trouble is mental.

Let us suppose that you have no disease or organic trouble and yet show all the symptoms described in the patent medicine ad.

You don't feel good. You have no pep. Mysterious pains come and go. You have little resistance, and thus you are subject to colds. Your digestion isn't good. You don't sleep well. You have nerves.

Very well. Assuming that your physical machinery is sound, it is quite probable that you are a self-made invalid.

You are doing one of two things to poison yourself. You are nursing a grudge or worrying.

You are enduring some burden or association unwillingly. The person responsible irritates or bores or angers you almost beyond bearing. You brood over your wrongs. You day-dream of rebellion or revenge. Yet you hide your malice and nurse your grievance in secret.

Or, if that isn't it, you worry. You imagine dreadful things, and feed your anxiety on tomorrow's troubles which may never come.

And thus you take a short cut to the cemetery. Your glands make or break you, and their functioning depends on your state of mind. If the mind is wrong, the glands are wrong; if the glands are wrong, the whole body is wrong.

The cure, of course, is mental. Just make up your mind not to care. You can awake each morning with a light heart and a grin of well-being if you will learn the simple and saving art of not giving a darn.

Golden Eagles Of Romanoffs Retain Perches

Visitors Amazed as Czars' Birds Survive Harsh Soviet Clean-Up.

Moscow (U.P.).—The golden double-eagle standard of imperial Russia still keeps its lofty perch above the palaces of the Kremlin.

Walking along the banks of the Moscow River in late afternoon, when the domes and spires of the Kremlin palaces, just across the stream, stand in bold relief against a red sky, the stranger is surprised to see two golden eagles atop almost every building.

"What!" one exclaims in surprise. "The symbol of the czarist autocracy flaunted over the Kremlin, the very citadel of the revolution!"

Yet there they are, these proud gilded metal birds, in all their ancient splendor, reflecting the last rays of the sun.

The Soviet government, so far as this correspondent could learn, never has offered any official explanation of its failure to remove the double eagles from the Kremlin. But it is understood that esthetics battled with politics—and won.

The gilded eagles do add tremendously to the impressiveness of the Kremlin palaces. So the Communist chieftains apparently decided to ignore the symbolism of the birds and retain them as mere objects of beauty.

But just as the Bolshevik revolution swept autocracy from Russia and established Communism, so the coming of night obscures the double eagle and ushers the red flag into its own. When all is dark the czarist symbols are invisible. But high above the central dome of the Kremlin, bathed in a flood of illumination from many spot-lights, floats the red banner of the Soviets.

The scene in the Red Square, below, especially in winter, is one of rare beauty. Here is a vast, snow-covered plain, flanked on one side by the high Kremlin wall, built to keep nomadic invaders from the palace of the czar. On two sides stand massive government buildings, one red, the other white. And on the fourth side is the Cathedral of St. Basil, with its varicolored, odd-shaped towers, more Byzantine than Russian, not beautiful, but arresting, like some weird object seen in a dream.

And there, just under the Kremlin wall, is Lenin's tomb—a pyramid of polished red marble, with two soldiers in ankle-long coats and peaked caps standing as sentinels before the door.

Italy Plans Mass For War Dead

Coffins of 120,000 Will Lie in Memorial.

Trieste (U.P.).—Fifteen huge concentric, stairways beneath which will be chambers for the coffins of 120,000 of Italy's war dead, will form a vast necropolis which is nearing completion in the vicinity of Trieste.

The transformation of the present war cemetery at Redipuglia, where 30,000 dead are buried, has been accomplished, and the new necropolis is to occupy the entire Sant Elia Hill, which will look like one great stairway.

In each step of the great staircase will be placed two coffins, and the names of the dead will be engraved on the face of each step.

The obelisk at present topping the hill will be replaced by an underground chapel, in the center of which will be a mausoleum for the body of the Duke of Aosta. The necropolis will be the final resting place of all the bodies at present buried in the various war cemeteries in the battlefields of the Carso Plateau.

'It's Just Concentration' Says Canary Song Judge

St. Louis (U.P.).—Leonard Taylor, of Ogden, Utah, here for the annual grand championship canary and cage bird exhibit and song contest as a judge, explains his work as "merely a matter of concentration."

An expert with canaries, Taylor judges the tone of their songs four at a time. Although the four birds may be warbling at the same time, Taylor explains that "If I want to hear No. 1 bird, I just don't listen to the other three. It's easy."

Daily Talk About Books and Authors.

Sir Thomas Browne and Mark Twain.

In one of Mark Twain's minor works, "Some Rambling Notes of an Idle Excursion," a profane old sea captain says that all the Bible miracles are easy to understand if you know the facts. Thus, in the miracle of Elijah and the prophets of Baal, where Elijah called down fire from heaven, and it consumed the altar (I Kings: 18), it will be remembered that Elijah made them pour an immense amount of water on the altar before the fire came. Now the captain declared that the liquid was not water, but petroleum. "Yes, sir, the country was full of it." . . . You read the Bible. Don't you worry about the tough places. They ain't tough when you come to think them out and throw light on them."

Well, in Sir Thomas Browne's book, "Religio Medici" (The Religion of a Physician), published in 1642, the author, who was both devout and scientific, said in all seriousness that the devil sometimes tries to make us disbelieve in Bible miracles by suggesting a natural explanation.

"Again, having seen some experiments of bitumen, and having read far more of naphtha, he whispered to my curiosity the fire of the altar might be natural; and bid me mistrust a miracle in Elias, when he entrenched the altar round with water; for that inflammable substance yields not easily unto water, but flames in the arms of its antagonist."

I wrote to Mark Twain on the subject, and on April 24, 1901, I received the following characteristic letter:

"I was not aware that old Sir Thomas had anticipated that story, and I am much obliged to you for furnishing me the paragraph. It is curious that the same idea should have entered two heads so unlike as the head of that wise old philosopher and that of Capt. Ned Wakeman, a splendidly, uncultured old sailor, but in his own opinion a thinker by divine right. He was an old friend of mine of many years' standing; I made two or three voyages with him, and found him a darling in many ways. The petroleum story was not told to me; he told it to Joe Twitchell, who ran across him by accident on a sea voyage where I think the two were the only passengers. A delicious pair, and admirably mated, they took to each other at once and became as thick as thieves. Joe was passing under a fictitious name and old Wakeman didn't suspect that he was a parson; so he gave his profanity full swing, and he was a master of that great art. You probably know Twitchell, and will know that that is a kind of refreshment which he is very capable of enjoying. Sincerely yours,

S. H. CLEMENS."

Many Literary Prizes Given To Frenchmen

Awards Spur to Higher Accomplishments by Wide Fields.

Paris (U.P.—No excuse in France for the literary procrastinator. More than 200 prizes annually await the poet, the author, the dramatist—and the pamphleteer.

An accurate estimate of the funds involved is not possible, because dozens of new prizes are born and old ones die every year. But the grand total runs in hundreds of thousands of francs and several thousand dollars.

There are several prizes for literary encouragement of Franco-American goodwill. These include the Prix Strassburger, $10,000, "for the series of articles having mostly contributed to Franco-American rapprochement;" an Atlantic Monthly prize of $10,000, and the Prix Brentano, $1,000, "to encourage relations between Franch and American letters." There are also 14 awards of 6,000 francs each given by the American Foundation of Paris.

Academy Gives Prizes.

The most effulgent prizes, of course, are those vouchsafed by the French Academy. There are about 80 of these and they run in total about 300,000 francs a year. Some are not award every year, others are split between candidates, or only partly awarded at a given time.

A very much-sought after award is the main prize of the Society of People of Letters—10,000 francs. This body also distributes minor prizes totaling about 50,000 francs. Less high-brow awards are made by the ministries of education and colonies.

Numorius prizes for poets are furnished by the House of Poetry, the chief one being the Prix Petitdier, 12,000 francs. Then there are the varius "independent prizes"—Goncourt, Memina, Gringoire, Renaissance, Europa, Nouvelle, Severine, &c.

Titles Interesting.

To be noted for their titles are "The Prize of the First Novel," the Prix Christaine of 300 francs "destined to succor the child of an invalid poet," and "The Prize for Aiding Ladies of Liberal Profession."

There is also a prize of the French Society for Protection of Animals. The newest award, created at the end of 1933, is the Prix Rester Jeune (youth prize) for the essay best describing how to ward off old age. No amount has as yet been fixed for this honor.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall

THE all-time largest-selling anthologies of verse, according to the Oxford Press, happen to be a couple of books I confess I never heard of before. The honor goes not to Quiller-Couch or Rittenhouse or Ward or Untermeyer or to that fat, ubiquitous volume, "The Home Book of Modern Verse," but to "Poems of Today," put out by the English Association. The first series sold 350,000 copies; the second series 132,000. I guess I'd better make their acquaintance.

* * * *

But in the meantime a companion collection appears—"The Modern Muse" (Oxford University Press, $2)—likewise from the impersonal hand of the English Association. It's a sort of English-speaking Union of verse, wide, thin, rather vowel-proud. Whereas its predecessors cast their nets solely over British poetry, "The Modern Muse" takes in American and Dominion poets as well, offering 216 examples from 133 oddly assorted lyricists.

THEO. HALL.

Writes the English Association (Laurence Binyon, president): "In each of the continents are vast numbers of persons whose mother tongue is English, and it is for the purpose of quickening among these peoples the sense of the greatness of their common heritage that this collection of contemporary poetry gathered from the four-quarters of the globe has been made."

As you might expect, then, the range is astonishing. Rabindranath Tagore stands beside Allen Tate, V. Sackville-West, beside Carl Sandburg. Robinson Jeffers is followed by James Joyce and Rudyard Kipling. There are poets from Australia, New Zealand, the Irish Free State, South Africa, India and Ceylon. Anthologies make strange bedfellows.

But what one misses in this studiedly representative conclave is the unity of some one man's choice. The pages read cold and collective, like a government report. I simply can not make out the taste which did the picking. "Gen. William Booth Enters Into Heaven" and "The Fiddler of Dooney" are fairly obvious—though in all justice to the anonymous editors it must be noted that they did their best to avoid anthology favorites. But why was T. S. Eliot's fine poem, "A Song for Simeon," preceded by this little piece of trite bravado written in Indian by the altogether too British S. G. Dunn?

"Calm and keen as the Punjab cold,
Hard as steel of the sword he bore,
Reared of the race that fought of old,
Loyal and stanch to his great heart's core;
Called from far, to the call he came,
Stood and fought for his Lord the King,
First on India's roll of fame—
Shabash! Havildar Ganga Singh!"

The volume is a handsome piece of printing. There are some valuable biographical notes. But almost anyone could have made an anthology just as good.

* * * *

I've seldom seen so ambitious a book as Hazel Gertrude Kinscella's "Music on the Air (Viking Press, $3.50). It is an energetic and painstaking attempt to do up brown the subject of music, particularly the music most heard on the radio. All sorts of experts contribute their bit—Daniel Gregory Mason states that music is an international language; Lawrence Tibbett describes the staging of opera; Thurlow Lieurance writes a piece on the music of the American Indian; Howard Hanson discusses tendencies in American music and so on. There are sections on humor in music, bands, transcription, the Russian school, orchestral instruments, how broadcasting works, and Dvorak's visit in Spillville, Iowa. The book prints some 85 pictures of musicians, gives a history of music in outline form, devotes 150 pages to biographical sketches of composers and interpretations of their principal works. I can think of very little in the realm of music which is not touched upon.

But that, perhaps, is the limitation—a touch-and-go skimming of a subject entirely too vast for one book, even so fat a one as this. Admittedly, however, the book is for a public which voted Beethoven's "Minuet in G," MacDowell's "To a Wild Rose" and Mendelssohn's "Spring Song" the three best pieces of music in existence. Miss Kinscella aimed her book at answering the most frequent questions of radio listeners. It does just that, fully, ably and readably.

Geneva Parley May Condemn Huge Warships

Maximum Weight Limit of 25,000 Tons Is in Prospect.

Geneva (U.P.).—The monster type of battleship is doomed, according to Geneva experts.

The 1935 Naval Conference, it is believed, will reduce the maximum tonnage of capital ships from 35,000 tons to around 25,000 or 22,000 tons.

The United States Government is at present opposed to reducing battleship sizes but reports reaching Geneva indicate this policy will be changed before the 1935 conference.

Great Britain, Japan, France and Italy, in Geneva discussions, have suggested the reduction of the maximum tonnage of capital ships. Alone the United States objected. England wants a maximum limit of 22,000 tons, while Japan seeks a 25,000-ton limit.

The smaller naval powers have proposed 10,000 tons as the maximum size of any warship to be built in the future. This was the limit put on Germany's naval construction at Versailles.

A study of naval charts shows that very few capital ships have been built since the war and the majority of these were launched shortly before the Washington naval conference was called to check such rivalries.

Britain Has 15.

Great Britain has 15 monster type capital ships ranging from the Hood with a displacement of 42,100 tons, to the Royal Oak class of 29,150 tons displacement. The Hood was launched in 1920 and the Nelson and Rodney in 1927. Britain's total tonnage of capital ships (474,750) does not count three battleships to be scrapped under the London Naval treaty.

The United States, likewise, has 15 capital ships, but its largest is the Pennsylvania, with 33,100 tons. Her smallest capital ship is the Arkansas, of 26,100 tons. The United States launched its last battleship, the Colorado, in 1923.

There is no provision for the construction of a battleship in the new building program of the United States. Previously the United States has always insisted on large battleships because of its widely separated territories and the necessity of obtaining a large cruising radius. Experts now say that battleships of 25,000 tons meet all these requirements.

Japan Has 10.

Japan has 10 battleships, with a total tonnage of 298,400 tons. Her largest displaces 32,700 tons and her smallest 26,330. The Nagoto and Mutu, both 32,000 tons, are her latest acquisitions. Both were launched in 1921.

Japan is particularly interested in getting a reduction in battleship tonnage because of fear of the United States. Without long-cruising heavy battleships the United States could not reach the Far East to protect the Philippines in case of war. Japan is also opposed to the aircraft carrier of which her four nearly match the four of the United States in tonnage. England has six aircraft carriers, with a total tonnage of 115,350.

It is not thought the 1935 conference will propose to scrap all existing battleships, but rather recommend that no more be constructed in the future. Thus they will die of old age.

This is just as pleasing to Italy and France as to England and Japan. Italy has only four capital ships, and they are all under 22,000 tons.

France has the Dunkerque of 26,500 tons and 9 other units all under 22,500.

Umbrellas of Paper To Sell for 15 Cents

Cleveland (U.P.).—Umbrellas, made entirely of paper and glue, to sell for 15 cents each and last for three months, are promised by J. B. Felber, 62, inventor, as a solution to what to do when caught downtown in a rain. He has a force of 25 employes making them now.

French Assail Own Air Force

'Red Tape' Charged; Paper Points to 'Army' of Officers, High Pay.

Paris (U.P.).—Twenty-three generals, 38 colonels, 73 lieutenant-colonels, 238 battalion chiefs. Such, not counting captains, lieutenants and reserve officers is the alleged red tape of France's Air Army.

Vigorous protest against this state of affairs has been voiced by La Griffe, politico-literary weekly, in a special number devoted to aviation.

Warning that in case of emergency this country's air force would be virtually paralyzed by surplus "red tape," the editor points to chapter 32 of the 1934 budget and to bill No. 1710 as evidences of threatening calamity.

The first measure calls for 7,498,000 francs "leave of absence expenses" for the 23 generals and 12 others, now on the reserve list. The second calls for creation of 40 new battalion chief commands.

The Griffe furthermore points out that the vice president of the Superior Air Council, in addition to his salary as division general, and in addition to "all his allowances," is scheduled to receive a new "fogy" of 34,000 francs "for entertainment."

The chief of staff of the air army, it is said, would get further allowances of 23,400 francs and each member of the air council would receive a "raise" of 29,880 francs under the proposed budget.

The Griffe urges as remedy that surplus officers be assigned to serve alternate terms in the air and land forces, or else that part of them, at least, be given work in government bureaus.

Staples Holds Change Needed In Fee System

Virginia Measure to End Waste, He Asserts, Outlining Aims.

Editor's note—This is one of a series of articles on legislation passed by the 1934 Virginia General Assembly, prepared for the Associated Press by members of the Legislature and heads of State departments.

By A. P. Staples
(Attorney General and Former Member of the State Senate From Roanoke).

Richmond, April 24 (AP).—For several years there has been increasing dissatisfaction with the fee system as a method of compensating public officers. The system has been unpopular not only with the general public, but with officers also.

In Gov. Peery's inaugural address he recommended legislation to place the city and county Commonwealth's attorneys, treasurers and commissioners of the revenue on a salary basis, and it was pursuant to his message that the so-called officers' compensation bill was introduced and passed by the General Assembly.

Political Control Period.

The suggestion that the local governing bodies—city councils and county boards of supervisors—be empowered to fix salaries was met with the very serious objection that the necessary result would be a powerful incentive to these officers to influence, if not control, the election of councilmen and supervisors who would in turn fix the compensation of the officers.

Instead of an intelligent uniform salary basis throughout the State, each local officer's salary would be controlled largely by prejudice or favoritism as the case might be.

Another suggestion was that the General Assembly fix each officer's salary, but this was open to the same objections, because past experience has proven that the result would have been that the local members of the General Assembly would fix their local officers' salaries.

Both of these suggestions having been considered unwise, a plan was proposed and finally adopted for the fixing of the salaries and expenses of each of these officers by a "compensation board." It is composed of the State tax commissioner and the auditor of public accounts, as ex-officio members, and a chairman to be appointed by the Governor. The compensation act prescribes maximum and minimum amounts within which the respective salaries are to be fixed, all county officers and city Commonwealth's attorneys being classified into groups according to the population of their counties and cities.

If the local governing body is dissatisfied, it may file any objections it desires with the conpensation board, which shall fix a time for a hearing. The local governing board is given the right to select two of its members, who will be members of the compensation board, and eacn has one vote in deciding all matters affecting these officers in their respective counties or cities.

A right of appeal to the circuit court of the county or corporation court of the city is given to the attorney general as representative of State, and also to any county or city, or any officer affected by any decision of the compensation board.

Delayed Until 1936.

In order to avoid any increase in cost until after the next General Assembly, this provision was placed in the act:

"In no case shall the total of the combined compensation of any such officer and the expence of his office be increased prior to July 1, 1936, any provision herein to the contrary notwithstanding."

It is confidently believed that the operation of this act will effect material savings both to the State and to the counties. State Tax Commissioner Morrissett has estimated a saving of at least 10 per cent on the average.

Woman Aid of Kelly Ready to Plead Guilty

San Angelo, Tex., April 24 (AP). Louise Seaton, charged with harboring George (Machine Gun) Kelly and his wife, Kathyrn, convicted kidnapers, was brought here today to face trial in Federal Court next Monday.

The woman said she would plead guilty to the charges. She is alleged to have purchased a car at Brownwood, Tex., last August and delivered it to Kelly. Kelly and his wife are serving life sentences for the kidnaping of Charles F. Urschel, Oklahoma oil man.

D. C. Bishop to Be Feted.

Charleston, W. Radio Waves and Ripples

WITH a darkened room lending just the right amount of anonymity, Washington's first array of dramatic causticians, brooking the mild presence of several radio scribes, previewed what you will be allowed to see at the Earle on Friday.

It's called "Twenty Million Sweethearts" and purports to show what the public does not see behind the scenes at a broadcasting studio. You will see a young radio singer on the mike aided by a bold, bad press agent and the fat wife of the president of Carlotta Soap.

Though the plot is pretty well worn, you will like several close-ups of Columbia's Dick Powell as the radio singer, the Mills Brothers in clinical poses, Ted Fiorito's orchestra and the Three Debutantes. This is practically the same program heard over WJSV daily at 10 p. m. Ginger Rogers parades her customary lush charms in an orthodox mixture of microphones, glass-partitioned studios and broadcasting magnates who push buttons and talk as though they were ordering out the British navy.

Typical shots: Powell's hands caressing the microphone. Powell's eyes popping. A dozen of the "Twenty Million Sweethearts" lounging in pajamas as they listen enraptured to the golden-voiced tenor. A broadcasting magnate, Harvard, '12, registering pompous indignation in a tightly fitted dress suit.

N. B. C., by the way, will warm up its short wave transmitter to broadcast a mighty conflict between employes of NRA and PWA in a ball game from the Ellipse on May 5 at 2 p. m. N. B. Dillinger Just Pawn of Crime, Darrow's View

Never Had Chance, Says Lawyer; Score Order, "Shoot to Kill."

"If John Dillinger had been the son of a Mellon or a Morgan, he would not be a bandit. The prisons are full of men who lacked opportunities in their youth. Childhood environment, combined with heredity, is what makes criminals. You can't do much about these fellows after they grow up. It is too late then."

Clarence Darrow, noted criminal lawyer and student of criminology, expressed these views yesterday in answer to the question:

"What makes a Dillinger?"

He said he had not followed Dillinger's career carefully, but that he was convinced that the explanation of his activities could be found in his boyhood environment.

How About Bank Failures?

"But why are you worrying so much about bandits?" he asked. "Why don't you worry about bank failures? Why don't you worry about money being in the hands of too few people? After all, that's what causes these things. That's why young people are denied opportunities. You will find that almost invariably our criminals have been brought up without the opportunities that should be theirs."

"That wasn't the situation with Leopold and Loeb," he was reminded.

Among the outstanding cases in Darrow's long career as a criminal lawyer was that in which he defended the two wealthy Chicago youths for the murder of Bobby Franks.

"Of course, their case was an exception," he said. "They had all the money they wanted. Leopold, in particular, was one of the brightest persons I ever knew. Their case was psychopathic. A crime like that wouldn't be committed again in a thousand years."

Darrow said he was opposed to the order of the Department of Justice that if Federal agents met Dillinger they should shoot to kill. Darrow has always held the belief that killing was no solution of the crime problem.

Heredity Also Cited.

"I can't be too emphatic that attention should be directed toward the young," he said. "Dillinger just couldn't have been raised with the care most people have."

Dillinger was reared on a farm near Mooresville, Ind. His parents are apparently in circumstances similar to those of many other farmers in the vicinity. Besides the fact of his upbringing, heredity must have played some part in making Dillinger a criminal, Darrow added.

"Of course, there is a reason why Dillinger is a criminal," he continued. "People should get into their heads that every effect has a cause. There is no such thing as chance. People should get over the idea of free will in this as in other cases."

Criminals begin their careers of crime early in their youth, Darrow said. Dillinger, he pointed out, first was sentenced to prison in his early twenties.

5,000 Police in Dillinger Hunt; Capture Held Matter of Hours

linger would be fully prosecuted, Purvis announced the four women would be jailed for as long as possible. He added that anyone giving information of the whereabouts of the outlaw would be protected by the United States Government.

Indignation began running high in Washington over Dillinger's latest outrages, and the House Judiciary Committee responded to a request of President Roosevelt by approving legislation making it a Federal offense for a criminal to cross a State line to evade arrest. Crime fighters said such a statute would be a valuable aid.

The killer of Special Agent W. Carter Baum, of the Department of Investigation, was named by Department of Justice officials at Washington as George (Baby Face) Nelson, wanted for robbery and murder. Eugene Boisoneau, a Civilian Conservation Camp member, was killed accidentally by Federal men as the Dillinger gang escaped Sunday night from a trap near Mercer, Wis.

Among the more definite reports of Dillinger gangsters being seen was the one at Muncie, another from Milwaukee that a large, dark sedan carrying four men with machine guns had sped through the city, and a third from Ellsworth, Wis., that three men had robbed a gasoline station owner, forced him to drive them for several miles, and then stolen his automobile.

Town Guards Banks.

Fearful that Dillinger might cross the boundary into Canada, three banks in Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., hired armed guards as a precaution. In Minneapolis, the Tribune reported that several persons were ready to testify that Dillinger had hidden out there for some time in a Park avenue apartment.

Indicative of the interest in Dillinger abroad, Chief of Police Thomas Dahill, at St. Paul, received two telephone calls from London newspapers. Dahill told them Dillinger had not been captured. The London News commented, "It is quite an interesting story over here."

In Berlin, the newspaper Zwoelf Uhr Blatt editorialized that with Dillinger loose, no voices should be raised in America against Hitlerism. The newspaper advised the United States to take a lesson from Germany and sterilize such gangsters.

13 Dillinger Killings; Law and Outlaws Even

Chicago, April 24 (AP).—The unlucky number—thirteen—is the toll of lives forfeited along the trail of John Dillinger and his cohorts.

The score stands even—six peace officers have died with six associates of the Dillinger mob. The thirteenth victim was a bystander.

Planes Asked To Hunt Killers Like Dillinger

High-Powered, Bullet-Proof Autos Also Needed, Says Cummings.

An air armada as well as bullet-proof automobiles and more man power are the Department of Justice's need to cope with desperadoes of the John Dillinger type.

This statement was made by Attorney General Cummings yesterday as the Judiciary Committee of the House was reporting out two anti-crime bills aimed at bank bandits and killers.

The Attorney General said an effort had been made to obtain airplanes from the War Department, "but when I took the matter up with Army officials, I got a cold shoulder. The air-mail situation came along and I did not press the matter."

The House Committee acted favorably on two of the seven anti-crime measures already approved by the Senate. The bills would make it a Federal offense for anyone to flee across State lines to escape apprehension or prosecution for crime. They would also broaden the interstate stolen automobile act to include securities, merchandise and other property of $5,000 or more.

Meantime, Speaker Rainey and Floor Leader Byrns conferred with President Roosevelt on crime preventive measures and announced they would place all legislation at the top of the list to be acted on before congressional adjournment.

On the Senate side, Senator Copeland told newspapermen there had been "a pathetic failure of co-operation between Federal, State and local authorities" in the Dillinger case.

"If they would send for some of the New York troopers and put them on the trail, they would catch him," the Senator added.

Cummings said the Justice Department's motor equipment consisted of cars confiscated during the prohibition era. "What we need now are cars that will go as fast as the devil, and we ought to have two or three armored cars."

Va. Education Parley Hears Dr. M. L. Combs

1,000 Delegates, Visitors, Attend Fredericksburg Meeting.

Fredericksburg, Va., April 24 (Spl.).—Dr. Morgan L. Combs, president of Fredericksburg State Teachers College, addressed approximately 1,000 delegates and visitors who attended the annual meeting today of the newly merged District Cooperative Educational Association and the district branch of the Virginia National Congress of Parents and Teachers Associations.

The junior boys and girls of the district met at the same time in the Fredericksburg High School auditorium.

Officers elected for the Fredericksburg district of the Cooperative Educational Association include Miss Ethel Nash, of Fredericksburg, chairman; Mrs. J. W. Smith, of Woodford, first vice chairman; Mrs. Gordon Banks, of Port Royal, second vice chairman, and Mrs. E. T. Stoner, of Roseville, secretary-treasurer. Mrs. Levert P. Graves, of Sealston, King George County, who presided over the meeting, is the outgoing chairman.

Speakers who led the discussion, treating of problems of interest to educators, included J. H. Montgomery, of Richmond, executive secretary of the State organization; Miss Freida Koontz, of Richmond, leader of the junior group; Guy H. Brown, superintendent of schools in Fredericksburg; Miss Ethel Nash, principal of the Fredericksburg elementary schools, and Mrs. Reuben Rolph, of Sparta, Caroline County.

The Fredericksburg High School band gave a half-hour concert, directed by Prof. John Vandeventer. Other musical features interspersing the program included a group of solos by Mrs. Elizabeth Graves, of Culpeper, accompanied at the piano by Miss Mary Lowery, of this city. The Junior League of Falmouth High School led the junior division in a series of songs and yells.

Sterilization Urged For Weak-Minded

Virginia Scientist Stresses Cost of Care.

Richmond, April 24 (Spl.).—More than 48,000 persons in Virginia are so feeble-minded that they require support and about 97,000 more are mentally sick, it was stated today by Dr. W. D. Hoyt, professor of biology at Washington and Lee University, who advocated sterilization of feeble-minded individuals in a speech broadcast here.

Pointing out that some $10,000,000 is expended annually by State, municipal and private agencies here for the support and treatment of Virginia's feeble-minded persons, Dr. Hoyt expressed the opinion that the State's present sterilization law, under which some 1,600 operations have been performed, does not meet all needs.

Dr. Hoyt stated that the number of feeble-minded persons in Virginia is increasing so rapidly, that families with such tendencies furnish a large share of the criminals and beggars, and burden the schools with pupils who take five or six years to reach the third grade.

"Goodness no.... my Gas Refrigerator never makes a sound!"

"Everybody seems so amazed when I tell them that our gas refrigerator can't possibly make a sound. But it's really very simple. You see, it's different from other refrigerators. It works without machinery—something, I guess, that sounds just as amazing. But it's this absence of machinery which eliminates any vibration or sound. And it's so inexpensive to operate! We figured it out and the money we save on food alone will more than pay the small monthly payments on the refrigerator.

"The Gas Company recommended it very strongly, which is another reason why we bought it. If we need service at any time, we know that the Gas Company is always there to render it, and that means a lot too."

Evolution, Not Revolution, Is Roosevelt Aim

National Planning Is Hope, He Asserts, in Defending Homestead Plan.

when he doesn't want to move. What we hope to do is to make it so attractive they will be anxious to change."

Although plans had been made for the White House to make public a stenographic report of the speech, which lasted almost 30 minutes, it was decided later not to issue it to the press. The only apparent reason for his sudden change of mind was that Mr. Roosevelt considered it too rambling for presentation as an address.

Clad in a plain business suit, the President entered the auditorium and immediately took his position behind a tall armchair, without bothering to be sated, as he was presented by M. L. Wilson, in charge of the homestead program. With him were Mrs. Roosevelt and several Cabinet officers.

Launching at once into an enthusiastic speech, Mr. Roosevelt referred to "the privilege I once had, back in 1920, of running for Vice President and being defeated." This campaign trip, during which he visited 42 States, taught him that planning should take the place of the Nation's "topsy-turvy" growth.

Survey Not Completed.

Again, as Governor of New York, he became aware that no plan guided the disposition of its 30,000,000 acres, and so initiated a survey to determine "what every acre is suited for" and also the "human and social needs" of communities. This study will not be complete for several years, he said, but ultimately will form the basis for intelligent relief.

Remarking that "we, as Democrats, believe it a good thing" for each State to find its own particular solutions, Mr. Roosevelt added that, nevertheless, "National planning must be carried out." He said jokingly he had been told that Henry Ford, asked what he thought of subsistence homesteads, answered, "It must be good, because I never could make a success of it."

His reply to charges of "revolution" brought a wave of applause from the several hundred specially invited guests. He followed it with a warning that the "evolution" of the Administration is experimental and many mistakes will be made—"we have got to discover the right and the wrong way."

The homesteads, a $25,000,000 project, in which Mrs. Roosevelt also has been particularly interested, he said justified themselves from the dollars-and-cents viewpoint. He held it much cheaper to make families self-supporting than to continue Federal relief indefinitely, without plan.

As an example of what the Administration intends to do, he mentioned the $25,000,000 which is going into the purchase of public lands. The forests will provide part-time work for inhabitants, he said, while bottom lands will take care of food supply. This system, he said, is in wide use in Europe.

The President was followed by Secretary Ickes, whose department includes the Subsistence Homestead Division. Declaring that one of mankind's deepest urges is love of the land, the Secretary outlined efforts of the Government to meet the problem of soil-nurtured people leaving farms for cities and suffering, consequently, stranded populations and the inability of people to support themselves fully with inadequate employment.

Sees Wide Development.

"I believe that future years will see a wide development of this idea," the Secretary added. "Attractive communities, each separate in itself, each individualistic, each self-contained, each expressing a variation from the original idea and yet conforming in principle to it, will spring up in all parts of the country. The Government is pointing the way because it is the only agency at this time in a position to experiment, but in time to come States and counties and volunteer organizations of people who want to live together and work together will carry on where the Government will have left off."

The necessity for caring for some 600,000 rural families now on relief was outlined by Harry L. Hopkins in his brief address. In Pennsylvania, he said, there are 60,000 stranded miners.

"What are we going to do about it?" he asked. "Ever since I can remember, we have been writing and talking about this problem."

The exhibit will be open to the public through Friday. Besides displays showing typical subsistence homesteads and the location of the Nation's 35 homestead establishments, handwork turned out by various cooperative and self-help groups in the country is shown.

Opening Day Draws Elite To Ball Park

Season's Premiere Counts President Roosevelt Among Spectators.

Griffith Stadium Throng Is Index to Capital Social Register.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Capital society, from the President of the United States all down the line, had a gay afternoon yesterday at the opening baseball game of the season. Gay it was until a thundershower drenched the field and more than half of the crowd.

The first game of the "all American" sport in Washington draws a brilliant crowd. The President on his arrival at Griffith Stadium yesterday received a tremendous ovation from the throng, and from the two teams parading across the park led by a gray-coated band.

A crowd of more than 20,000 stood as the Chief Executive, beaming with pleasure, rose to toss out the first ball of the season.

The President was accompanied by the Postmaster General, Mr. James A. Farley; Judge Lacey, of Cleveland; Mr. Bernard Baruch, of New York; Mr. Stephen Early, Col. Marvin McIntyre, Col. Edwin Watson, Military Aid to the President, and Capt. Walter N. Vernou, Naval aid.

Smart Attire on Display.

In the gay and colorful crowd was Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean, smart in a trim black suit with a white straw sailor hat banded in black ribbon. In Mrs. McLean's box were Mr. and Mrs. A. Mitchell Palmer, the latter wearing a gown of dark blue and white crepe and a wide-brimmed blue hat; Mr. Raymond T. Baker and Rear Admiral and Mrs. Emory S. Land. Nearby was Mrs. William E. Borah, wife of the Idaho Senator and a true baseball fan. Mrs. Borah wore a costume of pale beige wool with a small brown hat and sable furs. She was accompanied by Mrs. Joseph Cranford, who wore an ensemble of eel gray.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson occupied a box near that of President Roosevelt, and wore a suit of navy blue sheer crepe with a large hat to match.

Others observed at the game were Senator James Byrnes, Senator Joseph O'Mahoney, former Senator James E. Watson, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas R. Shipp and Mr. Bert New.

Ambassador Attends.

In a box on the third-base line, the Ambassador of Spain, Senor Don Juan Francisco de Cardenas, equipped with field glasses, was intent on the game. Senor de Cardenas is one of the few members of the diplomatic corps who understands and enjoys baseball. He has served in the only three countries in the world where baseball is played, as baseball: Japan, Cuba and the United States, and never misses a game if possible.

With the Ambassador were the Minister-Counselor of the Embassy, Senor Don Luis de Irujo; Mrs. Henry L. Roosevelt, wife of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy, who wore a brown two-piece suit and a brown hat trimmed with white, and Mrs. Eldridge Jordan, wearing a black coat trimmed with platinum fox and a large black hat.

Mr. and Mrs. Bernard B. Jones had as guests in their box Rear Admiral and Mrs. Cary T. Grayson and Mr. and Mrs. Robert V. Fleming. Mrs. Jones and Mrs. Grayson were dressed in dark blue with hats to match, and Mrs. Fleming wore a smart tailored suit of chartreuse and brown with a brown blouse and small brown hat.

Carrolls Are Hosts.

Mr. and Mrs. Bradish Carroll, jr., entertained at a large luncheon before the game, later taking their guests to their box. Among the guests was Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator, who spent the few moments he remained at the game in the President's box. The Carrolls' other guests were Mr. and Mrs. Linton Collins, Col. Lynch, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Simpson, Col. and Mrs. Robert Lea and Mr. J. Hall McKenney 3d.

Senator and Mrs. William H. King sat near the Presidential box, the latter wearing a black suit with a small black hat. Mr. and Mrs. John F. Crosby were in a box with Mr. Joseph Tumulty, and one of his pretty blonde daughters, Miss Alicia Tumulty. Mrs. Crosby wore a suit of Alice blue with a soft felt hat to match and a blouse of peach and brown printed linen.

Others at the game included Commissioner of the District of Columbia, Mr. Melvin Hazen; Mr. and Mrs. John E. Parker and Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Saul.

As the storm gathered the President and his party left the stadium, while thousands of others remained to brave the rain.

Mrs. Gibson, wife of Gen. William R. Gibson, was hostess at a luncheon at the Shoreham yesterday in honor of Mrs. George F. Winfield, of New York, who arrived last Saturday to visit Gen. and Mrs. Gibson.

Gen. and Mrs. Gibson, who returned recently to the Capital, have been the recipients of a number of social favors since their arrival.

Guests at the luncheon included Mrs. Louis Bash, Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, Mrs. David H. Blair, Mrs. Davis Elkins, Mrs. H. K. Dougherty, Mrs. William E. Howe, of Peoria, Ill., and Mrs. William M. Morrow.

Comes Spring, And Gardeners Get Interested

Everything From Pansies to Cherry Trees Selling for Low Prices.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

THAT back to the soil movement which characterizes the spring of the year is bringing a lot of would-be gardeners to the plant sale in a downtown store. A whole department has been given over to a variety of shrubs and flowers ranging from 2-inch pansies to 7-foot cherry trees.

There is seldom such an opportunity to purchase plants for these low sums. For instance, Colorado blue spruce seedlings are 59 cents for five. Six to eight-inch English dwarf boxwoods, two for 25 cents. Three-foot Norway spruces, 59 cents. And gloriously shady umbrella trees are only 49 cents.

A seven-foot Japanese "weeping" cherry tree, a mass of deep pink blossoms every spring, sells now for $2.75. Four-foot trees with double pink blooms are 49 cents. And the fruit bearers, 17 cents.

An interesting package called the "home orchard" includes an apple, peach, pear and plum tree—$1.19.

Twenty varieties of preplanted roses, guaranteed to bloom, sell for 50 cents, 60 cents and $1. Others called the Everblooming are 15 cents.

Five French lilacs, white, red, pink, purple and blue are only 89 cents. And a bundle of five assorted shrubs, including forsythia, mock orange, hydrangea, deutzia and weigelia is 59 cents.

This splendid assortment of plants priced so exceptionally low should set every Washingtonian with a plot of ground busy with a rake and hoe.

* * * *

Polo Shirts, All Colors.

A table filled with gayly colored polo blouses reduced to 89 cents will be a happy hunting ground for bargain seekers today.

These are washable knitted rayon, made in simple styles in good taste with sport outfits.

The blues, oranges, greens, beiges and reds will undoubtedly come in for their share of attention, but the whites appropriate with any color are apt to be favorites.

* * * *

Such Longevity.

Spun glass tulips have advantages over their natural prototypes. They'll last as long as they're not broken. They can be scrubbed to keep them fresh and colorful. And one batch which lasts a couple of years is less expensive than many natural bouquets bought over the same period of time.

If these are used in a green, black, or silver bowl, they make an inimitable center piece.

* * * *

It Can't Spill.

A French perfumer has two luxurious preparations at a local shop. One is a paste rouge for both cheeks and lips and the other a paste perfume. Both are inclosed in tiny dice available in all shades.

This perfumer has an extraordinary method. He concocts his scents not for temperaments, but for types—for blondes and brunettes.

Neatly and originally packaged, they're easily carried in change purse, dress pockets, or small evening bags.

The paste perfume when rubbed on the hand or the lobe of the ear—wherever you like to apply it—will last a long time.

A Whizz of a Fizz.

A specially designed siphon enables one to turn an ordinary bottle of soda water into a perfect fizzer.

It screws directly into the metal top and at the slightest pressure of the spring the contents of the bottle come fizzing forth.

It keeps the container so airtight a large bottle of soda water may be kept for several days without going dead.

Because of its extremely practical qualities and conservative price it's been dubbed the "drinkers' delight."

* * * *

No More Shine.

A creamy liquid in a small black bottle looks mysterious and interesting. It tempts one to invent fables about it, to call it a product of ancient alchemy.

It has magic properties, indeed. For it conquers the bane of a beautiful face.

Fair skin and regular features are far outshone by a shiny nose. But here in this little black bottle is a bit of fluid that keeps the shine away. A small drop rubbed over one's nose before putting on powder wards off the danger for many hours.

Like Magnified Lace.

Much effort went into the making of a hand-wrought flower stand on sale in a Connecticut avenue shop.

But much pleasure may be derived from its use. The gracefully twisted iron bands form an intricate design, like one small portion of magnified lace. It supports three flower pots lovely either with blossoming plants or ferns.

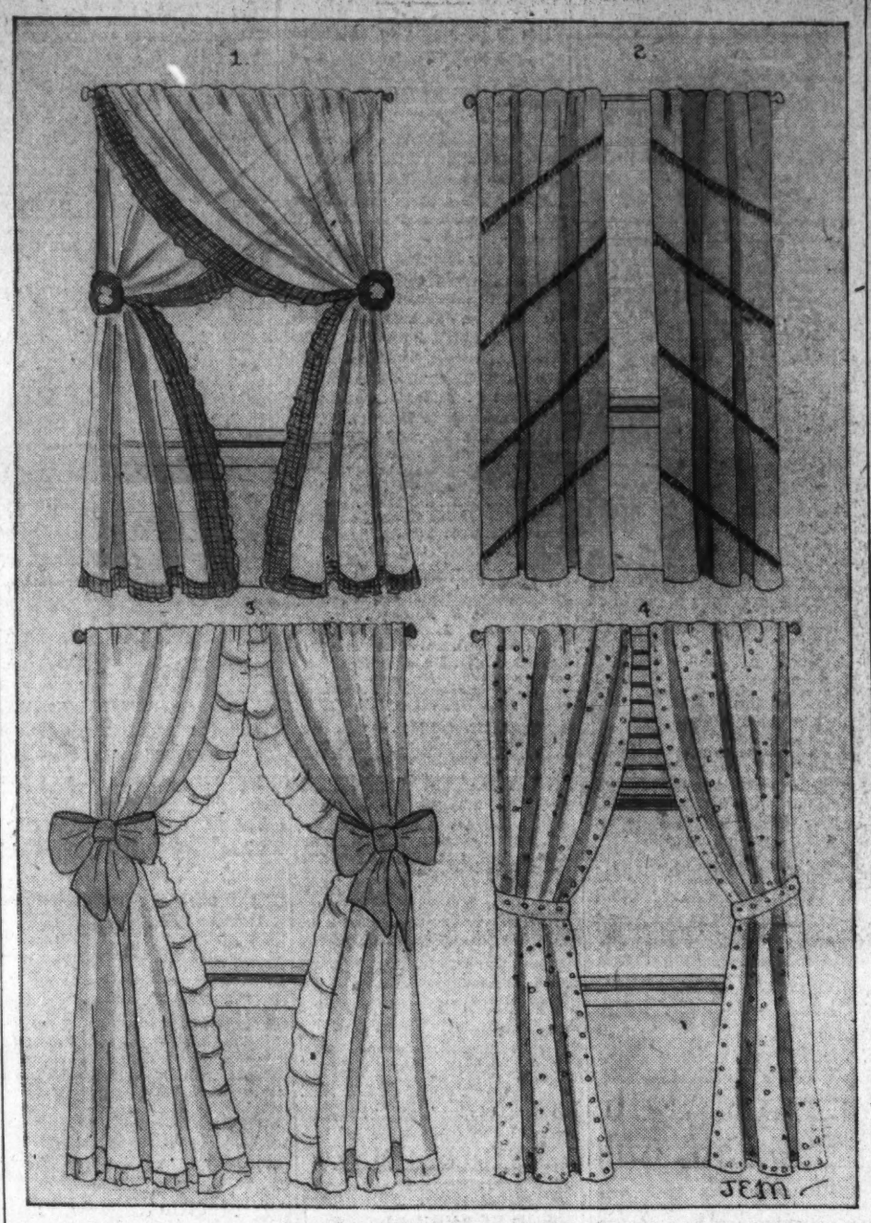
Filmy Curtains Give Summery Aspect To Rooms Gone Drab During Winter



Fringes, Ball Edgings, Flat Braids Are Important Trimmings.

By Jo Ellen Maxson.

SHEER, filmy curtains bring a summery look to rooms which have become drab and dull during the winter months.

Ready-to-hang curtains and draperies are available in charming ensembles and pleasing varieties, though many women prefer carrying out their own ideas in materials sold by the yard.

There are some tricky new devices for hanging curtains, too. Have you seen the flat braid and loop combination which is stitched to the top of the curtain and eliminates the necessity for pins, rings or plaits? It is sold ready made and is surprisingly inexpensive.

In today's sketch are four attractive new window treatments for various types of rooms. The first shows curtains of crisp white dimity edged with wide ruffles of plaid and held back with plaid tie-backs. They hang to the floor and are used in lieu of draperies, so the maximum amount of light and air can be admitted. These would be suitable for a morning room or bedroom.

In the second illustration, the curtains are of primrose yellow voile with diagonal bandings of brown cotton fringe. The diagonal note is very smart this season, and this is a unique way of introducing it into a room; these would be attractive in a living room or dining room.

The Victorian accent is felt in the frills and ruffles of the third curtain design. Here sheer net has deep ruffles (the curtains are white) and is draped back with piquant bows of French blue chintz.

Those in the fourth sketch are ready to hang draperies.

They are of cool green chintz with an amusing candlewick pattern in cream. These would be effective with a white Venetian blind in a bedroom. They are especially adapted for use in an Early American or Colonial type of house, and would be charming with a candlewick counterpane.

Miss Maxson gives individual help in home decorating problems. Call The Washington Post, NA. 4205, for appointment.

New Gadget Eliminates Use of Pins or Rings in Hangings.

Country Shoes Go to Town, To Comfort of City Dwellers

By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, April 24.—Fashion's feet are firmly on the ground. Encased in take-it-on-the-chin leathers with sturdy welt shoes and square-standing heels—all requirements of smart sports shoes, both active and spectator.

When you think of spectator sports shoes this season, you'll have to think of them as town shoes as well.

Because last summer found what have always been considered strictly country or spectator sports costumes coming into town.

They're going to do the same thing this summer. Because they are comfortable, cool, practical and neat. And spectator sports shoes come with them.

There'll be oxfords * * * regulation walking types with three or four pairs of eyelets, moccasin oxfords (that's a moccasin type sketched at the bottom of the picture, but it is shown with the lower golfing heel); side-closing monk type oxfords; ghillies (top sketch) and kiltie tongue oxfords (and both these last are also made with golf heels.)

There'll also be pumps and sandals. The sandals are usually T-strap style with a wider strap than dressier sandals have. Many will have the new, really low heel.

Heels of all these shoes, if not really low, will at least be broad of base and fairly straight of line, of built-up leather, as you see in the illustrations.

The leather is most apt to be calfskin, because this is one of the most serviceable. Grained leathers are practical, too, and in white shoes, buckskin is the usual choice.

They are quite simply trimmed. With perforations, combinations of two leathers (such as rough and smooth) or combinations of colors as white-and-brown.

Shoes of the types described are available in Washington in all the better shoe and department stores.

Water Colors Of Washington Homes Shown

David Payne Puts Some Charming Interiors on Canvas.

THE interiors of some of Washington's most charming homes have been portrayed in opaque water colors by David Payne. The collection, or "portraits in gouaches" as the artist prefers to call it, is exhibited at Schuyler and Lounsbury's, 1409 Twentieth street, and will be open until May 2.

One of the most delightful of the portraits is of the entrance hall in the home of the Honorable and Mrs. Irwin Laughlin. In this typically French hall Mr. Payne has caught the delicacy and detail which mark French interiors without cluttering his composition with irrevelent trifles. Views of the drawing room also are included in the collection.

Mrs. Guy Norman's library, as interpreted by Mr. Payne, has warmth and richness of color . . . is primarily a place to be lived in. The grays, golds, garnets and celadon greens are exquisitely blended.

Repose and relaxation are the qualities which Mr. Payne has achieved in his "portraits" of the drawing room of Mr. Jefferson Patterson's home.

The French drawing room of Mrs. Chauncey Depew is a subtle harmony of blues, pinks, ivory and beige as suggested in an antique Aubusson rug.

Other Washington homes included are those of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Sweeney and the Honorable and Mrs. A. B. Houghton.

Culbertson on Bridge

1025.

A Critic at His Best.

Any Bridge glossary worthy of its name must include a full description of the word "kibitzer" in all its etymological and (more important) anthropological connotations.

Mr. Adams, reviewing a recent match played between two prominent teams in Australia, goes to some length to be scathing and facetious in attributing the poor result on one hand to the unfortunate use of the Culbertson system. This was the hand:

East, Dealer.
North-South vulnerable.

	♠ J 8 7 ♡ 7 5 ◇ A 7 3 ♣ A 10 9 8 4
♠ Q 9 5 ♡ Q 10 6 4 3 ◇ K 10 9 5 ♣ Q	N W E S	♠ 4 3 ♡ K J 9 8 2 ◇ 8 6 4 2 ♣ K 6
	♠ A K 10 6 2 ♡ A ◇ Q J ♣ J 7 5 3 2

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
Pass	1♠	Pass	2♣
2♡	3♡	Pass	3NT
Pass	4NT	Pass	5NT
Pass	6♣	Pass	Pass
Pass

The Culbertson players, using the Four-Five Notrump Convention, bid up to laughable (according to Mr. Adams) contract of six clubs. I quote Mr. Adams' comments verbatim.

"He was defeated one trick. The Victorians bid the same cards to five clubs, which were easily produced.

Now, there is only one flaw in Mr. Adams' masterly analysis, and that is that the laughable contract of six clubs could easily have been fulfilled. East's lead of the spade four rather strongly suggests the probability of a singleton or doubleton spade. Certainly it does not appear likely that on the bidding he would lead from the Queen. North should therefore plan the play of the hand in such a manner as to avoid taking the spade finesse, it certainly offers less than an even chance of success. He should play the King of spades and then lead the Ace of hearts, followed by the Queen of diamonds. Whether West covers is immaterial; he can not prevent North from stripping hearts and diamonds from both his own hand and Dummy. Now the Ace of spades must be played, and after that the Ace and another trump. East, thrown into the lead with the club King, unfortunately is now helpless; any card he leads will give Declarer the fatal ruff and discard, thereby enabling him to fulfill the aforementioned laughable contract of six clubs.

CAPITAL KITCHEN

Here Are Some Good Ideas Concerning Art of Pie-Making.

By Susan Mills.

THE American family never tires of pies. They are almost a tradition, whether they are the ones Grandmother used to make, or the delicious creations the proud housewife sets before her doting spouse at the close of the evening meal.

There are ways and ways of making pie pastry. A little practice with a good recipe will guarantee satisfactory results.

Here is an extra idea or two to put into your pie-making repertoire. The doting spouse will appreciate a change in the usual dessert program.

Fried Pies.

2 cups flour.
1 teaspoon salt.
1-3 cup lard.
6 tablespoons cold water.
Apple sauce.

Sift and measure flour. Work the lard into flour and salt with pastry blender. When mixture has the appearance of coarse cornmeal, gradually add moisture, adding only enough to make dough soft enough to roll out. Roll into rounds about 5 inches in diameter. Place a tablespoon of sweetened, spiced apple sauce on each round. Moisten edges. Cover fruit with other half of the round or crust. Press edges together with fingers. Fry in deep lard (350 degrees F.). This makes about 6 pies.

The Story So Far.

Alec, so nicknamed as a joke because his last name was Hamilton, was the son of a well-to-do manufacturer. The first half of Alec's sophomore year at Columbia saw the crash of his world. He had been just an average boy—a student without distinction, a scrub sportsman, and a failure as a glee club tenor. He had fallen in love at first sight, got in debt, been pampered by his family, and then discovered his father a financial ruin. The heroine is a lovable, red-headed student named Mimi, a modern, independent, straight-shooting youngster. Students and at least one professor fell in love with her, and she fell for Alec. There was also Gladys, the blonde college widow, who had marked Alec for slaughter. Two other vital characters were Prof. Woolsey and his young wife, who taught Alec something of life. The tragedy of Neal, a boy who had to die, also left its imprint on Alec's character.

Broke and faced with the possibility of having to leave college, Alec finally found a job in a restaurant. There he suffered the humiliation of waiting on the girl he loved, accompanied by Prof. Woolsey, his strongest rival. In bitter rebellion he dashed back to the fraternity house and took on for that evening the job of gigolo. Mimi learns of this escapade and throws him over. Alec is filled with grief when Mrs. Barth dies. He reaches his junior year, and his sisters pay him a visit. Weinstein's parents entertain them.

Wally and Tom were rather out of this talk, but they established their own interests before long. Mr. Weinstein showing a keen desire to appreciate the saxophone, which had become popular since his youth, and Mrs. Weinstein remembering a motor trip to Cooperstown, which had been the occasion of a delightful luncheon at a Binghamton hotel.

After the theater, when he was alone with his sisters again, back at the King's Crown, Alec saw that the Weinsteins were on their minds, too.

"I like the mother," said Laura. "You can see where Eddie gets his charm."

"They're awfully sweet," agreed Beatrice, "but they don't seem American."

Alec nodded. "That's because they have culture. Haven't you noticed? If you don't fall over your feet you're not American."

"Wally doesn't fall over his feet!"

"Well, he didn't get excited about those Rembrandts and Rubens, did he?"

"They're not Rembrandts and Rubens!"

"Well, whatever they are."

Beatrice was doing the talking. "If Mr. Weinstein made all that money himself—and I don't believe he did, he seems too bashful—but if he did, where did he get time to collect pictures, and travel and learn languages, and that sort of thing? I couldn't make him out. He's more like a professor!"

"He admires Barth, all right," said Alec.

Pictures Inherited.

"He didn't make the money himself," Laura corrected. "They've had those pictures hundreds of years, when they were living in Spain."

Beatrice looked skeptical. "How do you know?"

"I asked Eddie."

Beatrice fixed a thoughtful eye on her sister. "You seem to like him."

"I do."

"A lot?"

"A lot."

The sisters faced each other, and Alec had the startled sense that here was a challenge of some sort.

"Eddie's a swell chap!"

He got up, yawned, and prepared to go through the ceremony of kissing his sisters good night.

"If Laura likes him, good judgment I say! You seem to be getting on pretty well yourself with Wally."

"Oh, but that's different!"

Being sleepy at the moment, he did not consider the difference too closely. More contented than he'd been in a long while, he sauntered back to his room in John Jay, thinking not of the show that Weinstein had taken them to, but of that house full of treasures, and all those servants, each more dignified than the other, and those three courtly people, with their respect for one professor.

A few days later he got hold of Tom.

"The girls are leaving tomorrow. Wally wants to throw a party, Eddie wants to give us another blow-out, and since they're my sisters, I'd like to do the honors myself, so hold yourself ready while we fight it out! You're a guest, and later you'll know whose!"

Tom took his arm, as though to help him over a rough spot.

"If you've any sense, you'll let me give a party for one, and that one will be you! Let duty call you away for this evening! Then Wally and Weinstein each can give separate parties. They'd like to!"

Alec woke up. "You think so?"

"Try it and see!"

He was startled to see how much they liked it! Weinstein took Laura to a concert. Wally carried Beatrice off to a dance. Tom and Alec studied the situation over beer at the Gold Rail.

"I don't see why you're surprised," said Tom. "They're swell girls, and they're reaching the man-hungry age. I don't blame them; it's natural. Neither of those fellows is good enough for them, but you might as well begin saving up for the wedding presents!"

"They've been here only five days!" protested Alec.

"Man, you can get married in an afternoon!"

"I don't agree," said Alec, "that they aren't fine fellows."

"Who said they weren't? They're not good enough, that's all! Wally's a roughneck, and he'll probably be Governor of Arizona some day. They like them that way, Eddie—"

"He's not a roughneck."

Tom hesitated. "No—he's all right—in his place."

"What d'you mean?"

Tom laughed, slightly embarrassed. "Well, if you must have plain words, do you want your sister to marry a Jew?"

"Why not?"

"Oh, come—you know what I mean!"

Alec hadn't thought of Weinstein as a Jew, any more than he had thought of Tom as a Nordic. "Of course he's Jewish, but what of it? He's a swell chap. I'm no Hitler."

"Neither am I."

"Sure you are!"

"They always," said Tom, "have relatives."

"You're a bigot!"

"Well, it's none of my business. I'm just sorry to see Laura making a mistake."

"You know," said Alec, "this talk seems to me damn shabby! I feel degraded."

Tom looked more than annoyed. "Go easy, there! You've still got a lot to learn."

How to Keep Well

Keep Them Limber.

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

"A movement a day keeps adhesions away." This epigrammatic statement was found in an article on chronic arthritis written by a British physician. In this connection he was writing about the chronic form of joint trouble commonly known as arthritis deformans. This is a very chronic disease, lasting for many years, and causing a great deal of deformity. It affects the joints and the bones that form them, but it is very apt to spare the vital organs.

The bones are likely to be considerably enlarged, with very large heads.

The use of heat and light on the diseased bones and joints is very helpful. A friend of mine has refused for thirty years to let his joints become stiff. His method is hard work and much bending of joints, particularly on hot days and in the bright sunlight.

What Today Means

"Taurus."

If April 25 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:30 a. m. until noon, from 3:30 to 5:30 p. m. and from 6:30 to 8:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:30 to 9:30 a. m., from 12:30 to 2:30 p. m., and from 9:30 to 11:30 p. m.

If a woman and born on April 25, you probably have a great deal of vocal ability and should put it to use.

The child born on April 25, when old enough to understand, must be taught the importance of persevering when it undertakes to accomplish something.

The man born on April 25 possesses a great deal of dramatic ability and a personality that will hold the attention of any audience, regardless of whether it consists of one or many people. Egotism is a characteristic to be avoided if popularity is desired.

Rockefeller Center Called Modern Architecture's Superlative Achievement by Artist

She Carries Broadway All Over the Country

Maud Scheerer, Who Has Lifted Impersonation Into Rank of Real Art, Curries Essence of Popular and Worthwhile Plays.

By Helen Fetter Cook.

TO CARRY THE REAL essence of plays on Broadway to groups in schools, clubs, and other gatherings all over the country is the task Miss Maud Scheerer, American actress, elocutionist, reader and impersonator has chosen as her particular field.

She calls her one-man shows dramatic "re-creations." And re-create these plays is what she really does. An audience of a couple of hundred people was invited to see Miss Scheerer in her first program in Washington last Saturday night, presented by Bess Davis Schreiner and Caroline McKinley in the latter's studio. They found her a completely fascinating and gifted person.

Talent for Humor.

Miss Scheerer, one of those persons blessed with hair that is neither gold nor red but quite intriguing and as nature made it, showed a genuine talent for humor and a keen insight into the desires and thoughts of humans.

"Oh, yes, I am American," she laughed when queried as to nationality, for she has a British intonation in her voice.

"I was born in Kansas and I am very gald of it," she added. "Kansas is a grand place to grow up in. It is so free from prejudices and traditions. It is the center of many experiments—some of them quite ridiculous—but at least, they inspire thought and stir one's imagination.

"I am sure I developed personality there that might never have blossomed had I been born in stern, circumscribed Boston or New York with its ruthlessness and the sheep-like quality of many of its groupings. I was a timid child and the quiet unassumingness of my native Kansas gave me a chance to develop individuality."

Timid she may have been, but apparently that didn't mean stage-fright in Maud Scheerer's case for she won several elocutionists' medals while a youngster. She then hied herself to Northwestern University to seek higher education with literature her goal.

"It was there, however," said Miss Scheerer, "I discovered how much the values of great literature depended upon interpretation and that dramatic reading was an art with a technique and depth to it that merited placing it alongside of all the other arts. There, I had implanted in my mind the seed of the true value of re-creation: how the artist can give the author's words enrichment.

"So I went to Boston to Leland Powers and after graduation from his dramatic school was immediately put on his faculty—which I felt was a great compliment. Then I began my own work, following his footsteps in what one brilliant writer indignantly called 'the bastard art': impersonation. But I found New York filled to overflowing with others in the same field.

"One of my biggest successes last year was a program based upon the prize-winner, 'Of Thee I Sing,' which I gave at a prominent university, assisted by a jazz orchestra which played music from the Gershwin score.

"I happened to give the program before an audience of 5,000 the very night that the show opened in New York. Later, when I saw the show myself, I exclaimed to a friend with me: 'Why, this audience is not laughing half as much at the actual show as my audience laughed at my interpretation!'

"'I suppose you think you're funnier than Victor Moore!' retorted my friend.

"But, really, my point was this: In the actual show there is so much distraction in the way of setting, costumes, choruses and so on the comic point comes as a flash and is immediately swallowed up in something else almost before the audience has a chance to digest the funny idea and completely enjoy it.

Critical Value.

"Therefore, a re-created sketch outling these things, giving different characters and deas of the play, has value in preparing a future audience to more fully enjoy the play itself.

"Also, such a sketch has both instructive and critical values.

Certainly the other night when she gave her cleverly sophisticated "re-creations" of "Mary, Queen of Scots" and "Elizabeth, the Queen," she pointed the true, innate quality of the Maxwell Anderson plays.

Underwood & Underwood.

PHILLIP H. GIDDENS, above, left Columbus, Ga., a good many years ago, with the intention of becoming an architect. Fate made him an etcher instead. He has drawn inspiration from all over the world, but he finds in America a distinctive modern architecture which challenges artists to new and superlative achievements. Right is an etching he has done of Christ Church in Alexandria, Va. His fame is international, and his works are owned in England, France and America.

Love of Verse Male Attribute, Opines Editor

MEN are as fond of poetry as women, but they are not so frank about it.

Probably the prevalent idea that love of verse reveals a feminine sort of weakness is responsible for the fact many men who read poetry in private never admit it in public.

These are opinions of Mrs. George Elliston, widely-known newspaper woman, editor of the Gypsy Poetry Magazine, and National poetry chairman of the League of American Pen Women. She will preside at the poets' luncheon today at the Willard and will conduct the Poets' Forum tonight.

"It is a mistaken idea men don't like poetry," she said yesterday. "They do like it, even though they are usually reticent about letting people know. If one can get a peep into almost any man's private notebook, one is almost sure to find a poem or two."

Men Discovering.

She further pointed out many men are now discovering what most women long have known—that poetry can be a very vital part of life.

"What many people do not realize," she continued, "is poetry is for everybody—not just the scholars, the intellectuals. The Rotarian, the housewife, the professional man and the man on the street can make poetry as much a part of his life as the pedant who devotes his days and nights to books."

MISS MAUD SCHEERER, above, is more than an actress. She is a whole stock company, when she gets down to her business of "re-creating" Broadway shows for audiences off the beaten track.

New Dime Novels

THE DIME NOVEL is returning to the American people in new guise nearly three-quarters of a century since Erastus Beadle, of western New York, set up his presses and turned out the first of millions of little books that sold for 5 and 10 cents a copy and brought to their readers authentic, purely American literature and biography.

• • • •

The 1933-34 version is known as the Jacket Library. The principal difference between the Jacket Library and dime novels is that, so far, the former has produced only established classics. However, Sherman Mikell, editor, said last week, when he was honor guest of the Woman's Press Club, the next aim of the Jacket Library is to print worth-while new works of authors who are not yet established.

• • • •

Mr. Mikell, who is young, blond, modest and sincere, says his company does not want to make profits. It was started on funds borrowed from friends who believed in it, and has justified their belief and is now self-supporting. More than 2,500,000 volumes have been sold in the United States since the Jacket Library was started.

• • • •

The newest book issued, Judge Brandeis' "Other People's Money," has sold 100,000 copies in three months. Oddly enough, 80 per cent of the purchasers of this book were women. Very interesting—women admit they want to know more about money!

Inspiration School.

THERE ARE many schools of painting. Provincetown has colonies where they match up "spots of color" and give everything a touch of lavender, and Glouchester has other schools which prove inspirational after one gets used to the constant smell of fish and can concentrate on art.

But the former Julia Thompson, of Washington, has the most disconcerting method of all in doing her frescoes which she is exhibiting at Dr. and Mme. Khan's Persian art center.

• • • •

"I do not know when I put the paper before me what form or colors the picture I am about to do will take," admitted the tall, graceful Miss Thompson. "I lightly pencil the paper in a smudge and there, before my eyes, as a picture grows in a crystal, my picture develops and I paint it."

• • • •

Miss Thompson links this inspirational art with her interest in the religious philosophy known as Bahaism. All the characters in her frescoes have an Oriental quality both in feature and in the color combinations of their garments. Some of them are such as one finds in early books illuminated by both the Oriental and the Christian monks.

Vibrations the Important Thing, Maintains Color-Aura Inventor

Anything From a New Hat to a Wealthy Husband Can Be Procured by Persons Who Wear Their "Aura" With Determination and Consistency.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

THE WOMAN who has her eyes on a certain man, a certain job, or a certain social position, can have all of them with a few other desirable things for good measure, providing she wears the right color. It is color and not love that makes the world go 'round, says Beatrice Nicholas Townsend, inventor of the color-aura, who will speak this afternoon at the Sulgrave Club.

This is the way the aura works, as explained yesterday afternoon by Mrs. Townsend in her suite at the Wardman Park Hotel: Each person vibrates to the color under which he was born, according to signs of the zodiac. But in addition, there are three other colors in the offing that also stir up vibrations that will enable a woman to get everything from a new hat to a rich husband.

Men also vibrate to color but they have less chance to wear their "aura" unless they go in for bright-hued socks, ties, and handkerchiefs.

When asked how a man could obtain his share of vibrations, Mrs. Townsend suggested he have his rooms decorated in his particular color aura. He might even extend it to his motor cars or his golf clubs.

The chief difficulty lies in finding out what colors make up the individual auras. Anybody can find his one zodiacal color by simply looking in the almanac for the right sign and then learning what color is governed by that sign. For instance: Persons born between April 21 and May 21 have Taurus as their sign. They should wear yellow. But these persons must consult some one with a clairvoyant eye to learn what three colors make up their aura.

Persons who were born between May 21 and June 21 have an opportunity to do some very constructive vibrating. Their colors are red, white and Blue.

That Magnetic Green.

Those who have birthdays between June 21 and July 21 should wear green, says Mrs. Townsend, as this color has magnetic attraction for the opposite sex. A few green vibrations and the heart's desire will be obtained.

Orange should be worn by those born between July 21 and August 21, especially if they are seeking happiness in marriage, as orange induces a spirit of cooperation. It also gives its wearer the ability to copy and perfect somebody else's work.

Black is the best color for the period from August 21 to September 21. Blue rules the vibrations between September 21 to October 21. Those born between October 21 and November 21 should give serious consideration to golden brown.

Gold will bring tremendous vitality and ability in any line to persons whose birthdays fall between November 21 and December 21.

This is Mrs. Townsend's color chart for the remainder of the year: December 21 to January 21, silver gray, which has high spiritual vibrations that may lead to the destruction of egotism; January 21 to February 21, Nile green, which vibrates assertively and destroys reticence; February 21 to March 21, white, which brings peace and fulfillment; March 21 to April 21, rose; April 21 to May 21, yellow, which gives glamour and radiance, but is likely to make its wearers too talkative. Yellow is an excellent color for singers and actresses. Violet is just the opposite. It vibrates in a quiet, retiring manner and is best for those who write in a philosophical or metaphysical vein.

The reason so few women have helpful vibrations is their inclination to wear a red dress one day and a violet one the next, Mrs. Townsend has found. This haphazard system of choosing one's colors keeps the vibrations so upset they can not accomplish much good.

New York Is Spectacular City But Depressing, Says Giddens

Is Impressed Anew With Soothing Quality of Washington With Its Spaciousness, Stately Government Buildings and Mellow Embassies.

By Elizabeth Young.

INTRINSICALLY the most American of all American cities, architecturally the most spectacular city in the world, New York is likely, also, to be the most depressing city to sensitive people.

"New York is built on a scale so overpowering as to reduce man to a feeling of infinitesimal unimportance," Phillip H. Giddens, artist of international note, said yesterday.

But Likes Rockefeller Center.

Mr. Giddens, whose etchings hang in the Library of Congress, in the Bibleotique Nationale in Paris, in the collection of Sir Joseph Duveen and other connoisseurs, including Mrs. Herbert Hoover, catches this impression of Manhattan on his return to America after nearly two years in London.

And yet he believes Rockefeller Center in New York City embodies the superlative achievement of modern architecture.

"There is a Greek refinement about its architecture. It fulfills the dual need of practicability and beauty. Scarcity of land is the great obstacle to achieving spaciousness in New York and structures must shoot upward," said Mr. Giddens, when interviewed at the home of Wolcott Clarke Waggaman, 2124 Florida avenue northwest, a fellow student of Beaux Arts days in Paris, whom he visited here.

"This necessity," he said, "has been met in a chaste, direct way, with a powerful intensification of line, in the architecture of Rockefeller Center."

The Poised City.

Washington, on the other hand, impressed Mr. Giddens anew with a suggestion of monumental poise, peculiarly soothing to the spirit. For this, he holds the architecture essentially responsible; the mellow continental flavor of its embassies and legations; the sturdy simplicity of the Government buildings.

Modern architecture growing out of metropolitan American need offers, in Mr. Gliddens' opinion, a tremendous challenge to artists to arrive at effects never dreamed of heretofore.

"With architects expressing a type of structural art that is uniquely American, there must follow a realization of the infinite number of interesting subjects waiting to be presented by artists, painters, etchers, musicians, sculptors, in the modern American spirit," he said.

Mr. Giddens is opposed, however, to the school of modernistic art—in any medium—which leaves the beholder more bewildered than interested; a reaction he has often experienced when attempting to analyze much so-called modernistic and cubistic art.

"In art, while it is important to be truly sincere and original and to have something to say, it is also important to know how to say it," he said.

"Any would-be 'modern' artist should have gone through a phase of academic training. One reaches the conclusion about so many moderns that they are posing. Some of them use the term to cover a multitude of sins in art."

Architectural Aspirations.

Mr. Giddens, a comparative youngster despite a distinguished touch of gray at his temples, has been capturing the spirit of people and places in etchings for 15 years. Armed with a scholarship and soaring ambitions, he left his home in Columbus, Ga., more than that number of years ago for a Continental grounding in architecture. But after he had dashed off an etching to decorate a Christmas card to friends in London, one season, the fates ruled otherwise. One etching led to another—by request—and the second won him a cash prize, was hung in the British Museum, and set his feet in the path of the artist.

Half a dozen of his etchings—all of which he holds to a limited printing of 50 proofs—hang in the Library of Congress. Others are in the British Museum, the Art Institute of Chicago, the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York, and in the private collections of Adolph Lewisohn and other noted art patrons.

The April issue of The Spur carries an exquisite reproduction of his "Perspective of Jerona," done in Spain last summer, between the French border and Barcelona.

Although he draws his inspiration from many countries, Mr. Giddens returns to America at intervals, and his interpretations of the architecture of New York City, Chicago and Washington constitute some of his most important contributions to the etching field.

1812 Daughters To Elect Their Officers Today

Mrs. Baughman, Mrs. Weinmann Candidates for President.

A SUCCESSOR to Mrs. Robert J. Johnston, president national of the Daughters of 1812, will be elected this afternoon in the small ballroom of the Willard Hotel at the regular afternoon session.

Leading contenders for the office are Mrs. J. Harris Baughman, of Louisiana, and Mrs. John Francis Weinmann, of Arkansas, both of whom are experienced in club work and prominent in their home States.

Mrs. Baughman organized and was president of the Col. John Sevier Chapter in Tallulah, La., and first vice president and president of the State society of the Daughters of 1812. In Kentucky she organized and was president of the Gen. Benjamin Logan Chapter in Danville and was first vice president of the State Society.

In addition to her activity in local and State organizations she has also filled the offices of fourth vice president and parliamentarian on the National executive board. She was National chairman of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Foundation, furnished the National headquarters, and was chairman of the Southwestern District and of the Memorial Markers.

Her work has not been confined entirely to the organization of which she hopes to be president, for she has also been State president of the Colonial Dames, State president of the Society of Founders and Patriots, and State regent of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Mrs. Weinmann, the other candidate, has served as registrar, historian, vice president and president of her own chapter and corresponding secretary, historian, vice president and president of the State society of the Daughters of 1812. At present she is historian national of the same organization.

The long list of clubs of which she is a member includes the Daughters of the American Revolution, Daughters of the American Colonists, the American Red Cross, the American Association of University Women and the Daughters of the Confederacy.

Society Views Public Works Art Products

Thousands Attend First Private Showing at Corcoran Gallery.

Capital society cast appraising eyes over an impressive array of paintings produced by artists commissioned under the Public Works of Art project, in a private showing at the Corcoran Gallery of Art yesterday.

The attendance of about 3,000 attested eloquently to a keen interest among Washington's elite in the precedent-setting enterprise of the Government.

In the room of statues the Marine Band provided music that quickened the spirits of guests entering from the rain-dreary out-of-doors.

The pictures are on exhibition on the upper floor of the "old section" of the gallery, in space usually occupied by the American Art collection. The large oil paintings are hung "on the line" and the smaller water colors and prints arranged in groups of twos and threes.

Mrs. Roosevelt arrived just a little before 6 o'clock, after having accompanied the President to the exhibit of subsistence farm projects in the Commerce Building. She was wearing a smart tailored suit of light blue mixture, a small dark blue straw hat, and a handsome silver fox scarf to which was attached a cluster of orchids.

Yaden Fights Recreational Staff Slash

D. C. Commissioners to Deny Request for 150 Workers.

Alleged Duplication Said to Be Reason for Economy Move.

Loss of public school recreational facilities faces Washington this summer because of the threatened rejection by District authorities of a request for 150 workers to carry on the program of the Community Center Department, James G. Yaden, president of the Community Center Council, revealed today.

The reason given for not supplying the requested workers is that the activities of the Community Center Department allegedly duplicate those of the Playground Department, Mr. Yaden said.

"This is in no way true," he declared, "because the Community Center activities are planned in sections where there are no playground facilities. The Playground Department furnishes recreation for children almost altogether, whereas the Community Center activities are planned for adults as well. Furthermore, the Community Center program is for both indoor and outside play, while the Playground Department is exclusively an outdoor project.

Affects 150 Jobs.

"Because of this false opinion of duplication, the people of Washington are to be denied the recreation facilities of public schools and 150 persons will be deprived of jobs," Mr. Yaden added.

The Community Center appropriation for this year is $30,000, a cut of $12,000 from last year's appropriation, Mr. Yaden pointed out. With this curtailment, the only way in which the center's program was carried on this year was through 34 teacher leaders furnished by the now abandoned CWS. When the CWS was discontinued, the 34 workers were continued until April 1 on relief funds. They were dropped after that date.

Mrs. Elizabeth K. Peeples, director of the Community Center Department, wrote to Commissioner George E. Allen, asking for reinstatement of these 34 workers and employment of 120 additional out of relief funds. It was learned yesterday that the Commissioners intend to reject this request because of their opinion that the playground department duplicates the work that would be carried on by these employes.

Quinn Backs Yaden.

Mr. Yaden declares that 150 persons eligible for relief could be given these jobs. Mrs. Peeples said that the 34 relief workers were "very efficient."

Henry I. Quinn, chairman of the committee on community use of buildings and grounds of the Board of Education, joined Mr. Yaden in voicing protest against the threatened curtailment.

Establishment of young people's clubs throughout the city, authorized by the Board of Education, will be impossible without the additional workers in the Community Center, Mr. Quinn declared. The object of these clubs was to furnish constructive leisure activity in evening hours to graduates of high schools and colleges who have not found employment. The program was not to be restricted to this group, but would be open to any persons in the various communities interested.

Operation of the clubs was proposed in the following schools: Central, Eastern, Roosevelt, Western, Eckington Recreation Center (McKinley Langley schools), Buchanan, Dunbar, Garnett Patterson, Francis, Terrell and Deanwood.

Deterrent to Crime.

None of these schools have playground department activities save Dunbar, where a cooperative program is carried on by the Community Center and Playground Departments, Mr. Quinn said.

"Playground activities," Mr. Quinn declared, "are daytime activities. Community Center activities are carried on in the late afternoon and evening. Playgrounds are primarily for children. Community centers are primarily for adults. Playgrounds operate out of doors. Community centers operate in school buildings as well as on the school grounds.

"The hours of darkness are the hours of danger," Mr. Quinn observed. "Crime is costing the District $1,121,000 a year. The Community Center Department has worked hard and earnestly to furnish as much wholesome recreation as possible with its tiny budget. If given workers under emergency relief it can do more."

B. McCawley, the Rev. Peter V. Masterson, S. J., of Georgetown University; Milton S. Eisenhower and Warren J. Grimes.

"Vale of Wrath and Tears" Is Under Fire

This section of the Mall, where the bonus riots occurred and the apex building was never built, must be cleaned up, Representative Robert Luce and Charles Moore, chairman of the Fine Arts Commission, insist. They have put the matter up to the supervising architect of the Treasury. The picture also shows the "model bungalow," which was never completed.

D. C. Resident Ends Life With Auto Exhaust

Daughter Discovers Man Seated in Car Wiht Motor Running.

A certificate of suicide was issued by Coroner A. MacGruder MacDonald in the death of Wilson R. Burch, 49, who ended his life early yesterday by inhaling monoxide fumes from his automobile, parked in the garage at his home, 5341 Broad Branch road northwest.

Burch's body was found by his daughter, Louise, 21. The motor of the car was running. Miss Burch told police she and her mother heard Burch when he drove into the garage Monday night, and that they went to sleep, thinking he soon would come into the house.

When they missed him on arising, Miss Burch went to the garage where she discovered her father sitting at the steering wheel. The Fire Rescue Squad's efforts to revive him were futile.

Two notes, one to his former employe, in which he denied responsibility for certain financial losses, and the other to his widow, Mrs. Bessie Burch, were left. In the latter he bequeathed his estate to his widow and daughter.

Only the widow and one daughter survive him. Funeral services will be from the Chambers Undertaking establishment tomorrow at 2:30 p. m. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Speeder Arrested Twice in an Hour

Conrad Christel, 28, an attorney, is probably just catching his breath today.

Last Sunday he was arrested for speeding twice within an hour on the same street. Yesterday, with startling swiftness, he appeared in Traffic Court, was fined $20 on the two counts and disappeared.

Policeman R. V. Sinclair, the traffic squad's "champion arrester," halted Christel twice at almost the same spot. First, he was charged with speeding 40 miles an hour and was booked at headquarters.

Less than an hour later Sinclair again stopped him on Connecticut avenue northwest. This time Christel was charged with driving 50 miles an hour.

Judge John P. McMahon fined the attorney $10 in each case.

Misplaced

2 Topcoats Stolen From Autos at Ball Game.

At least two spectators anticipating topcoats yesterday upon emerging from sodden Griffith Stadium were disappointed when they returned to their automobiles.

Police said Malcolm White, of the 4400 block of Fourteenth street northeast, missed his coat from his auto parked at Fourth and College streets and Warren Wagner, of the 3600 block of Park place northwest, lost coat and gloves from his machine in the 300 block of W street northwest.

Fine Arts Chairman Asks Eyesore Elimination on Lower Mall.

The Capital's fenced-in vale of wrath and tears, where the bonus riots were fought and the Apex building was never built, is in for a general cleanup if a Massachusetts Congressman and the chairman of the Fine Arts Commission have their way.

The area is bounded, roughly, by Maryland and Pennsylvania avenues, Third and Seventh streets. One of its squares saw the slaying of a bonus marcher in July, 1932. Another is the proposed location of the proposed Apex building for Federal offices.

These squares and several others are surrounded by board fences, which were erected when Washington was invaded by bonus seekers almost two years ago. It is these fences which Representative Robert Luce and Charles Moore, chairman of the Fine Arts Commission, want removed and the plots they enclose cleaned of rubbish and put to use.

Luce has put the matter up to Louis A. Simon, supervising architect of the Treasury.

The board fences and rubbish-littered squares inside them are a disgrace to the city, argue Luce and Dr. Moore. With work rapidly advancing on the adjacent Mall and Union Square developments, it is necessary these eyesores be eliminated, they declare.

The Apex Building has been authorized by Congress and the design has been approved but the appropriation is not yet available. Possibly it will never be erected. On its site is a partly-finished bungalow, started a couple of years ago as a model home but never completed.

Hope is not yet lost—Washington Monument stood partly finished from 1859 to 1876, after being started by popular subscription, then was taken over and completed by Congress in 1884.

But meanwhile Representative Luce and Chairman Moore think something should be done toward improving the appearance of Pennsylvania and Constitution avenues.

Weppner Wins "Prix de Rome"

Architectural Fellowship Is Captured by Catholic University Man.

Robert A. Weppner, jr., 27, a graduate of Catholic University, has just been awarded the highest American honor in architecture, winning the annual fellowship of the American Academy in Rome, it was learned yesterday through the executive secretary of the academy, Roscoe Guernsey, of New York.

The much coveted "Prix de Rome" open only to unmarried American citizens not over 30, consists of a two-year-and-a-half stay in Rome at the architectural center of the academy.

The subject of the competition was a design for a memorial in Washington, dedicated to the Founder of the Republic. Weppner's design was chosen the best over 130 entrants and 9 finalists, by a jury composed of Chester H. Aldrich, Louis Ayers, William Mitchell Kendall, John Russell Pope and James Kellum Smith.

Weppner, who came to Washington from Lakewood, Ohio, completed a four-year course in architecture before he graduated from Catholic University, two years ago. Since then, he completed his post-graduate work by working as an assistant instructor in architecture at the university.

The other finalists were: David Aldrich, New York; Vernon F. Duckett, Washington; John L. R. Grand, Washington; Roderick Jones, Homestead Park, Pa.; George T. Licht, New Rochelle, N. Y.; Elmer Love, Champaign, Ill.; Walter Sanders, New York, and Thomas Stathes, Washington.

Bill to Affix D. C. Stamps On All Liquor

Committee Favors Move to End Reported Tax Evasion.

A District stamp tax on all liquor sold in the District is provided in a bill favorably reported yesterday by the Senate District Committee.

The bill is designed to put an end to reported evasion of taxes under the present law which stipulates that dealers shall report purchases and sales each month and enjoy a period of grace within which to pay prescribed taxes. District officials told Congress it was found difficult, if not impossible, to assure payment of all taxes due.

The bill already has passed the House and now goes to the Senate for passage. It does not change the prescribed taxes, but merely provides that liquor dealers shall buy tax stamps to be placed on liquor containers, as are Federal revenue stamps.

The House bill providing for amendment of the law so as to permit chain store systems to take out licenses for each establishment was tabled by the Senate committee. It was indicated nothing will be done about the proposed amendment of the local liquor label law, which District officials said was difficult of enforcement.

They proposed National label requirements be made applicable in the District. This proposal was stricken out of the chain store amendment on motion of Representative John J. O'Connor (Democrat), New York.

Assurance of financial responsibility to pay damages is required of operators of taxicabs under provision of another bill favorably reported by the committee.

Senator Robert R. Reynolds (Democrat), North Carolina, subcommittee chairman in charge of the measure, was authorized to favorably report to the Senate the King bill amending the usury laws of the District. The proposal that the small loans law should be amended by the same measure was disapproved.

Court's Ear Tests Boops and Doops In Hunt for Dupe

New York, April 24 (AP).—Five reels of "Betty Boop," "Boop-Boop-A-Dooping," were shown to the Supreme Court today and solemnly marked into the evidence of Helen Kane's suit against Cartoonist Max Fleischer and the Paramount-Publix Corporation.

Theh session was held in the Paramount building. The judge sat in the first row The "Boop" girls, whose voices "booped" on the sound track, Mae Questel, Bonnie Poe and Little Anna Little, were in the audience, as were Miss Kane and her husband, Max Hoffman, jr., and Fleischer.

Miss Kane is asking $250,000 damages on the ground the "Betty Boop" cartoons illegaly appropriated her style of singing. Justice McGoldrick, adjourned the case until tomorrow.

In the Blood!

The name of the son of William Jennings Bryan, who fired the West more than 30 years ago with the cry of 16 to 1 silver, appeared yesterday on the list of those holding substantial amounts of the metal.

The item in the report submitted to the Senate by Secretary of the Tressury Henry Morgenthau, jr., read:

"Wm. J. Bryan, jr., Los Angeles, had a long position on March 4."

No amount was given.

Senate Group To Hear D. C. Budget Pleas

Restoration of Slashes by House Predicted; Hearings Today.

Little Hope Entertained That Lower Body Will Recede.

Restoration of the annual District appropriation bill to the basis proposed by the Bureau of the Budget was forecast yesterday on the eve of hearings which will begin at 10:30 a. m. today before the Senate District appropriations sub-committee, of which Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, is chairman.

The House slashed the annual Federal contribution and several appropriations, notably the public utilities funds, materially below the figure recommended in the report of the Budget Bureau.

The House cut the Federal appropriation from the recommended $5,700,000—the same as was appropriated the current fiscal year—to $4,364,295, the lowest figure since the present District government was established. Although the Senate is expected to restore the amount to $5,700,000, there seems little prospect that the appropriation will be raised above that figure, and the Senate conferees will have to fight to hold it that high.

Senate Fights in Vain.

Reduction of the appropriation by the House marks another step in the history of that body's treatment of the District, which year by year has resulted in decreased Federal appropriations for the National Capital. The Senate has been steadily beaten back in its annual fight for a higher figure than prescribed by the House and each year has seen a losing compromise for the District.

The District Commissioners and Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor and budget officer, are to be the first witnesses heard by the subcommittee, Senator Thomas said. Other District officials will be heard as their departments are reached in the committee's progress through the bill.

Representatives of civic and other organizations as well as private individuals will be heard on various items as they are reached. Senator Thomas has invited those desiring to be heard to communicate with Kennedy F. Rea, clerk of the committee.

See More Court Pay.

Increased salary allowances for the District courts will be asked of the committee by Justices Wheat and Bailey of the District Supreme Court and Aukum of the Municipal Court.

Thomas J. Llewellyn, of the Federation of Citizens Associations, and Dr. Llewellyn Jordan and George C. Shinn, of the Board of Trade, are expected to urge provision of funds for making a survey and drafting plans for a bridge to replace old Chain Bridge.

Among others who have asked to be heard are Gen. P. C. Harris and Watson B. Miller, chairman of the rehabilitation committee of the American Legion, who want provision for continuing the education of children of veterans killed in the World War; Mrs. Joseph R. Liddane, representing Potomac Heights civic organization, and Mrs. Mabel Hubbell, representing Kenilworth organizations. Several others also are expected to be heard on other provisions of the measure.

King's Palace Store Anniversary Marked

Celebration of the golden jubilee of King's Palace Department Store, founded in April, 1859, by Henry King, was held yesterday by the Advertising Club of Washington at the Raleigh Hotel.

Among those attending were Harry and Sylvan King, son and grandson of the founder. In the principal address of the banquet, Sylvan King recalled the early store and patrons as Presidents Grant and Lincoln, and linked its development with the growth of the city.

Ukranian to Speak Tonight.

'Elder Michaux' Is Arrested by Phantom Police

A 20-year-old colored youth, who said his name was Elder Michaux, appeared in Police Court yesterday to tell of having been arrested by a "phantom policeman."

The youth was arraigned before Judge Isaac R. Hitt. Bailiffs looked around for the arresting officer. He could not be found.

"What were you arrested for?" the judge asked.

"I don't know, your honor," the youth replied. "I was just watching a fight when up walks a man and says 'I'm a policeman, come with me.'"

At the Second Precinct station, where Michaux was taken, nothing is known of the case.

"You are dismissed," said Judge Hitt.

Suspect in Mechanics Bank Holdup Returned From Boston

John H. Carroll, Alias Curran, Faces Grand Jury Action.

Facing grand jury indictments as an alleged participant in last year's robbery of the Washington Mechanics Savings Bank, John H. Carroll, alias James F. Curran, 31, brought to Washington yesterday following extradition proceedings in Boston, will be arraigned for hearing in District Supreme Court Friday.

Carroll was charged with robbery yesterday soon after his arrival in custody of a United States Marshall and Detective Sergts. Floyd Truscott and Frank O. Brass. His share of the bank loot, police said, was approximately $7,500.

Giving his occupation as a carpenter and his address as East Cambridge, Mass., Carroll was questioned for several hours after being booked at headquarters. Police, however, refused to disclose results and he was sent to the District Jail.

Carroll was reputed to be a member of the Spencer Walden gang, held responsible for numerous local robberies. Walden is serving a jail term for robbery.

Police said that Carroll is the last of four suspects captured as alleged participants in the bank holdup.

Three Suspects Held In Store Burglary

Three men were arrested yesterday by Alexandria police on charges of breaking in the Fair Store, Hyattsville, earlier in the day. Dry goods valued at $75 were taken.

The men gave their names and addresses as Douglas Williams, New Orleans; James Anderson, Charleston, S. C., and Conrad Carter, Washington. They were returned to Prince Georges County police at Hyattsville.

Stadium Bill Offered House By Mrs. Norton

Amphitheater for Capital Would Be Provided in Anacostia Park.

A bill authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to erect a large stadium in Anacostia Park, at the end of East Capitol street, wil be introduced today by Chairman Norton, of the House District Committee.

Frederic A. Delano, chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, yesterday forwarded the bill to Mrs. Norton, with the reques tthat she introduce it. Mrs. Norton pointed out that it probably would be referred to the Public Buildings and Grounds Committee.

The Secretary of the Interior would be authorized by the measure to erect the stadium with funds borrowed from one of the several Federal relief organizations or private corporations or individuals.

Admission would be charged, so that the loan could be liquidated. Plans for the stadium would have to be approved by the Park and Planning Commission and the Fine Arts Commission.

Delano said that the 40-acre tract would make an ideal location for a public stadium and could be used for athleitc contests and civci and patriotic demonstrations. He said that Washington needed such an exhibition field.

The stadium would be located between Twenty-first street and the Anacostia River. The site was selected several years ago by the District Commissioners, as the logical location for a municipal stadium.

$75,000,000 in CWA Fund Given to FERA

Because the Civil Works Administration was brought to an end ahead of schedule, President Roosevelt yesterday was able, by Executive order, to transfer $75,000,000 of its remaining appropriation to the Federal Emergency Relief Administration.

Congress, February 15, appropriated $950,000,000 for the CWA and the FERA, both under Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins. Of this sum, $450,000,000 was allocated to the CWA.

"Claw" Trial Is Held Up By Ball Game

Judge Adjourns Court So Jurors May See Season Opener.

Police, District Attorney Tell of "Playing" Machines.

Justice laid aside her scales in Police Court yesterday, adjourned to Griffith Stadium to witness the opening ball game, and left the future status of "claw" machines undecided in the midst of much good-natured legal bantering before Judge Isaac R. Hitt.

After hearing an hour's testimony in the District's "test" case to determine whether or not the "claw" machine is a gambling device, the jury was excused to attend the ball game and Judge Hitt continued proceedings until 11 a. m. today.

William W. Wakefield and James S. Jawish, local restaurant proprietors, appeared as defendants. They are charged with permitting gaming in their establishments—920 F street northwest and 5912 Georgia avenue northwest, respectively.

Lieut. George M. Little, police vice squad chief, was the first witness. He testified to playing several devices during an inspection tour on Friday, April 13. On cross examination by Defense Counsel Harry Whelan, he told how Assistant District Attorney David A. Hart "won two prizes for one coin."

Sergt. George C. Deyoe, second in command of the squad, also told of visiting several machines to watch their operations. He obtained eight prizes after placing nearly 100 coins in 15 machines, Deyoe testified.

The devices operate in the manner of a minature steam shovel it was pointed out. When the "claw" fails to retrieve a prize, candy is returned for the coin.

Only two types of machines are manufactured. One of each type seized by prearranged plans was presented as evidence in court yesterday.

Good-natured laughter echoed through the courtroom when Deyoe, at the request of defense counsel, attempted to win a designated prize. After five "trys" he won two prizes, including one pointed out by Attorney Whelan.

Deyoe, however, insisted that on several occasions when he played the machines, prizes were so fixed that it was "next to impossible" to win.

At this point, as Hart called for a third Government witness, Judge Hitt recessed his court "so the jury can go to the ball game."

Welfare, Loan And Alley Bills Reports Today

House Committee Seeks Favorable Action on Three Measures.

Chairman Norton, of the House District Committee, today will seek favorable reports on three pending District bills.

The first to be presented would authorize the District Commissioners to assume executive authority now vested in the Board of Public Welfare. This measure has already passed the Senate.

It will be reported to the committee by a subcommittee headed by Representative Palmisano (Democrat), Maryland, without recommendation because of opposition voiced by Washington welfare agencies.

The next to be considered is the bill authorizing the District Commissioners to borrow $20,000,000 from the Public Works Administration.

The third is the long-delayed alley dwelling improvement measure, which now carries indorsement of the Budget Bureau, as a fund of $500,000 would come from the PWA instead of the Federal housing corporation fund.

Several other District bills are awaiting action by the committee, but Mrs. Norton does not expect they will be considered today.

New Hearing Set On Utilities Bill

Briefs to Be Filed by Plan's Opponents.

Another hearing will be held on the Public Utilities Commission bill designed to expedite litigation arising from its orders, Representative Black (Democrat), New York, chairman of the public utilities subcommittee of the House District Committee, said yesterday.

Black said that he wished to give E. Barrett Prettyman, corporation council, an opportunity to answer contentions of counsel of the local pubic utilities that the bill would be unconstitutional.

Attorneys for the utilities have filed briefs with Black in support of their contention and have threatened to carry the issue to the courts if Congress enacts the measure.

The bill, drafted by William A. Roberts, special councel of the commission, would limit appeals from commission orders to judical issues.

Approval Due Today For Keech, Roberts

Favorable report on the nomination of Richmond B. Keech to be a member of the District Pubic Utilities Commission and of William A. Roberts to be people's counsel is expected to be made at a meeting of the Senate District Committee to be called today by Senator William H. King (Democrat), Utah, chairman.

DICK TRACY Spotted!

Walt Mason, Himself

The Happy Time.

We're always recalling the past days, sublime; the present seems galling compared with that time. Then rubles were growing on bushes and trees, and kopecks were flowing like chaff in the breeze. Prosperity flourished from pole unto pole, and everyone nourished an opulent roll. It's good to be chatting of glad days now spent, when all men were batting a thousand per cent. You'd think, when we're spieling of joys once on deck, that no one was feeling a pain in the neck. But, looking behind me to those gladsome years, reflections remind me of troubles and tears. Some griefs were prevailing in that golden age, with echoes of wailing and thunders of rage. The men in high places, congressional gods, were grinding our faces and stealing our wads. Collectors of taxes made life such a bore we clamored for axes and shotguns and gore. Our money was squandered, our rights were o'erthrown, wherever we wandered we sent up a groan. Though commerce was snappy, with money to spare, we all were unhappy and burdened with care. For woe we were seeking, as always we've done, since Adam was speaking his piece in the sun. Some topics distressing we seek evermore, forgetting the blessing that's parked at the door.

Yanks Defeat A's, 1-0, on Home Run

Crosetti's Clout in 6th Gives Ruffing Win Over Marcum.

NEW YORK, N. Y., April 24 (AP).—While the assembled bombardiers of baseball did little more than go through the motions, a Yankee substitute, Frankie Crosetti, struck the one big blow that gave the New Yorkers a 1-0 verdict over the Athletics today.

A crowd of 40,000 fans, out for the opening game of the American League season here, cheered lustily for the mighty maulers, Ruth, Gehrig and Foxx, but Crossetti's home run into the left field stands furnished the main thrill. It came in the sixth inning and gave Charles Rufus (Red) Ruffing, big Yankee right hander, a brilliant decision over John Marcum, the pride of Eminence, Ky.

Crosetti, the former Pacific Coast star who has been battling for a regular job for two years, was in the game as a substitute at short for Red Rolfe, now laid up for leg repairs.

Ruffing and Marcum waged a fast-ball duel that kept the big crowd on edge. Each allowed only four hits and Marcum collected half of those yielded by his rival.

Ruffing pulled himself out of a hole in the ninth to tally the Yankees' first shutout of the season. With one out, Finney singled and Foxx walked, but McNair popped to Heffner and Bob Johnson fanned.

Aside from Crosetti's home run, the Yankee attack got only one runner as far as second base. Gehrig was thrown out at second trying to stretch his base hit in the fourth, after which Ben Chapman, who had bunted safely, was caught off first.

Red Sox Beat Nats in Opener; President Leaves in Fourth

Felicitates Managers.

Flanking the President in his box were Postmaster General Jim Farley, Financier Bernard Baruch and White House Secretary Marvin H. McIntyre. Up to the bunting-bedecked pew came Managers Joe Cronin and Bucky Harris to receive the Presidential felicitations as photographers scurried for points of vantage.

Grasping a shiny new ball and posing five full minutes for the benefit of the cameramen, Mr. Roosevelt unloosed the first pitch of the Washington season, a knuckle ball directed at the group of Washington players standing nearby. Very fittingly, Walter Stewart, Cronin's pitching nominee, won the scramble for the ball, saving the President a wild pitch with a sensational shoestring catch, and into his pocket it went as a memoir of the occasion.

Presently, the stentorian shout of "Play Ball" went up from the umpires, and the ball game was on.

Leaves After Rain.

But the President was spared the sight of the Nats' defeat. After due warning in the form of thunder claps that greeted the first inning, the rain came down in torrents, with Washington at bat in the fourth, a closed car was called for the President, and he made his way out of the park a moment before the umpires officially halted proceedings on the ball field.

For a full hour, the game was stopped while box-seat holders and the bleacherites scurried to the grand stands for cover. The gale-driven rain came down in sheets, as did the baseball writers' early stories, which were wafted from the press box atop the roof down onto the playing field while the reporters cursed their luck.

It was a scoreless tie until that point, with Walter Stewart engaging Welch in a pitching duel that promised to bloom into brilliancy, but the full hour's wait in the locker room moved Cronin to withdraw Stewart from the line-up and insert Jack Russell.

Four Straight Hits.

Decoying the Nats into a false sense of security with two easy outs in the fifth on the resumption of play, the Red Sox struck Russell swift and hard to smash four straight hits behind a base on balls and jam three runs across the plate which, subsequent events proved, were more than enough to win.

Back to Washington yesterday came Bill Werber, the former Capital schoolboy star, who was a perennial plague to the Washington pitchers with four solid base hits that figured in all of Boston's rallies. At shortstop for the Red Sox, he was breathing death and destruction, too, to abortive Washington rallies that met up usually with a sensational play by Werber.

Both clubs had been leaving men on base as Welch and Stewart tightened up in those early innings, particularly in the Washington fourth when no hit was forthcoming after Cronin and Kuhel drew passes with only one out, but the Red Sox stopped fooling in the fifth when play started again.

Bishop Draws Walk.

With two out, Max Bishop, the renowned chiseler of bases on balls, chiseled himself a walk out of Russell in the fifth and then came the eruption. The irrepressible Werber smacked a single out into center field. Eddie Morgan, the Red Sox refugee from Cleveland, pumped one of Russell's pitches to the same spot after Russell had attempted to feed him a slow ball. There was nothing slow about it as it sped into center field for a single.

Clean-up Man Roy Johnson performed his chores nobly and drove in the second Boston run with a slashing drvie past Cronin and then Carl Reynolds, the Nemesis of the Nats in the Boston series, dumped a pop single into right field, despite the fact that he never hits to right field, and Morgan scored with the third run of the inning.

More in Sixth.

The Red Sox came back for more in the sixth and then got one more after finding themselves opposed by Alvin Crowder who, like Russell, got two batters out and then was stumped. Rick Ferrell had singled and had been moved around to third base by the lower end of the batting order when Crowder attempted to lure Max Bishop into swinging at his celebrated slow ball. Bishop swung all right and the fourth Boston run was over the plate by the time Fred Schulte had picked up the pitch in center field.

When Buck Walters led off the eighth with a double into left field, where Heinie Manush had been dragging down extra-base hits all afternoon with one-handed catches, Crowder was removed and Bobby Burke, the fourth Washington pitcher, made his way into the game. He got Bishop out on a foul pop, but he couldn't get by this young fellow Werber. Werber smashed a single into left and Boston was now ahead, 5-0.

All of this time the Nats had succeeded only in failing to do any constructive hitting against Welch, who was repeating a five-hit victory over Washington earlier in the week in Boston.

Hits Are Unavailing.

Kuhel's single with two out in the second went for naught and Moe Berg advanced no farther than second base after leading off the third inning with a hit. Bluege and Berg left Cronin and Kuhel stranded after they had walked in the fourth, but the Nats made a gallant attempt to get back in the ball game in the sixth.

With two out they filled the bases against Welch when Schulte singled, Kuhel walked, and Bluege beat out a hit past Welch despite a sensational and unlooked-for stop by the ubiquitous Werber, whose throw to first was a split-second tardy. In came Sheriff Dave Harris to pinch hit for Berg with the 25,000 in prayerful hope that the Sheriff would tie the score with a home run.

Harris took two strikes and then hit the next pitched a mile—straight up. It came down harmlessly in the glove of Catcher Ferrell and the Nats were licked. Just to make it conclusive, Welch allowed no Nat to get on base in the last three innings, which helps explain matters.

School Series Tilt Halted by Storm

Roosevelt Leads Western, When Storm Breaks.

A driving rainstorm halted an auspicious inter-high school series debut on the part of Roosevelt yesterday against Western at Eastern Stadium, forcing the game to be halted in the first half of the second inning after the Rough Riders had assumed a 2-0 lead. The game has been re-scheduled for this afternoon.

Red Mullock, Western southpaw, walked Joe Bovello to start things off, and Francis Coakley sacrificed the runner to second. Giovannetti advanced Bovello to third on an infield out and Jack Neely brought him home with a double down the right field line. Johnny Rhodes' single accounted for the second tally.

The President Attends the Ball Game

Baseball Fan Roosevelt Consults Scorecard to Follow Game.

By Bill McSormick.

HALF an hour to game time, at Griffith Stadium, a cordon of photographers and reporters gathered about a battery of cameras aimed directly at a lower field box next to the Washington dugout. In front, the box is draped with the flag of the President of these United States. A carpened ramp runs from the box to the field.

Twenty minutes to game time, Col. E. W. Starling, head of the White House Secret Service, parades onto the field at the head of a squad of uniformed policemen, most of them officers. He shakes hands with Al Schacht and a photographer, then marches to the President's box,

Notes on Nats' Opener Here

VICE PRESIDENT GARNER arrived early and received quite a bit of attention from the newspaper and newsreel photographers, until the President arrived. Then he became just the Vice President again.

Goldman's Band serenaded the very early arrivals, but soon gave way to the Army Band, which arrived on the field just in time to herald the approach of the guys with the farrows. But they didn't play the "Volga Boatman" for them as they dragged their scrapers from base to base.

Thelma Griffith and Mrs. Griffith occupied their usual seats of honor in a box just behind the bedecked Presidential box.

Big Chief Saluskin of the Washington State tribe of Yakimas was on hand in full regalia before the game. He grunted over the radio, then helped Vice President Garner hoist the flag, fanning himself vehemently with a feather fan before the rain cooled off proceedings. Then he disappeard. Joe Cronin might have sent him in to pitch.

Former Attorney General A. Mitchell Palmer and a party of friends viewed the proceedings from a lower box near home plate.

The first lightning flashed across the northern sky at exactly 3:21¼ p. m. At 3:22, Clark Griffith had five less hairs.

There was plenty of fun in the locker rooms where the boys went to keep dry while Jupe Pluve reigned supreme on the diamond.

At 3:53 p. m., the first drop of rain splattered down. By 4 p. m., the high heavens were weeping on Mr. Griffith's ball club and Mr. Griffith was weeping to the high heavens. But the tarpaulin boys

Grove to Get Relief Role In Series

Harris, 'Like Kid Again,' Feels Mates Will Do Great Things.

Harris, Onslow, Judge and Reynolds Former Nats With Boston.

By Frank H. Young.

THE same Boston Red Sox and Nats, who drew a near-capacity crowd yesterday, meet again this afternoon, but, oddly enough, the fans will not be fighting to get choice seats, showing what a difference the crowds, color, bands 'n' everything make. It's the old, old matter of psychology and mental reaction.

With Whitehill not available today, Skipper Cronin plans to use "Prof." Monte Weaver on the hill and Bucky Harris will use Lefty Bob Weiland.

Harris, by the way, resembles the typical kid thrilled with a new toy. "I'm not predicting anything for my Red Sox," he said, but that smile which he wore when he said it told that his hopes are plenty high. "One thing I will guarantee," he added, "and that is that you won't find us out on that diamond with our hands behind our back. We'll be out there hustling and not waiting for the breaks—we'll try to make 'em ourselves."

Speaking of Lefty Bob Grove, Harris said the great southpaw would not be ready to start a game during this series, but might be called in for relief service, if needed. Lefty probably will be ready to work regularly in about ten days, Bucky believes.

Character Carries 123 Pounds to Head Victory in Havre de Grace Feature Race

Scotch Gold's Lead Fades In Stretch

9-2 Shot Is Kept Off Pace Battle; Makes Courageous Drive.

By Walter Haight
(Post Staff Correspondent).

HAVRE DE GRACE RACE TRACK, April 24.—"Character, why, that thing doesn't even belong to the horse family. Look at him." These remarks came today from a rather loud race fan who habitually parks in front of the press box to the annoyance of the chart makers. Even we who are very well acquainted with the ungainly son of Carlaris and Gayoso glanced to see if there were any change in the horse. There was not. He ambled along in the postward parade, a picture of anything but a race horse. In fact, he reminded me very strongly of the horse that used to pull the garbage wagon in my section and ate all the leaves off the lower branches of the trees on our block.

He walked along with head hung down, much in contrast to the formidable name they hung on him. A long, unruly tail that resembled witch hair was doing its best to wave. His coat, apparently full of cowlicks, looked as if he had been rubbed down with vaseline and someone had thrown clots of mud at him.

Jockey Kurtsinger Up.

On his back was Jockey Kurtsinger, no Clark Gable himself.

There is no use following Character to the post. His looks don't improve even at a distance.

But a few minutes later, when the racing began—ah, the racing—Character looked like a million dollars to those who had been down under the stands investing money, not in his personal appearance, but in his running ability.

Just 1 minute 11 2-5 seconds after Starter Milton sent the ,eld away from the barrier in the 6-furlong chute, Character had that shaggy head stuck out for the wire. And it was his margin of victory over Scotch Gold. A half length away and fighting to get up came Ilchester, owned by Mrs. Elmer Trueman, of Washington.

Lasts to Finish.

Jockey Kurtsinger evidently knew his Character for he was content to stay off the pace battle that Silk Flag and Scotch Gold waged on the trip down the back stretch. When Silk Flag threw up the sponge, Character went into the struggle with Scotch Gold, a tussle that lasted to the finish with Character having just a little more of what it takes.

Character was assigned 123 pounds for the sprint, but the determined little colt, in his courageous form, might have pulled a Mack truck with the breaks locked and defeated his field. The betters made Scotch Gold the favorite so Character backers, in addition to thrills, collected $11.20 for each $2 investment. Which ain't half bad.

Lady Sable Scores.

In the opening dash, a 4½ furlong sprint fashioned for maiden 2-year-olds, Lady Sable, from the J. E. Kenny Stable, graduated in easy fashion when she covered the distance with three lengths to spare. Second was captured by Barbarian from the Wheatley Stable, with third garnered by the rank outsider, Maple Prince, when he took a nose verdict over Carmanchita. Lady Sable paid her backers $16.10, while those with tickets on Maple Prince for third took down $54.20.

Bally Bay from the A. H. Schneiderman Stable, spread-eagled his field for speed to achieve one of the easiest victories witnessed at the meeting here. Wise Money, from whom most contention was expected, chased the winner over the line, while Sun Spear took the measure of the others. Bally Bay rewarded his backers a mutuel return of $4.90.

Jockey Raymond Workman broke the deadlock existing among three riders for the leading winning rider for the present meeting, when he drove Ambrose Cremen's Single A to a head victory in the 6 furlongs of the third event for his sixth triumph of the meeting to defeat the heavily backed choice, March Step. Third was landed by Electric Cafe. Single A paid $11.50.

Irene's Bob Triumphs.

Another success was added to the list of winning favorites when Irene's Bob atoned for his recent defeat at this track to turn back eight other smart sprinters in the 6 furlongs of the fourth event.

Workman earned his second riding success when he scored his eighth victory of the meeting to have Parity from the Mrs. H. D. Cox Stable return victorious of the sixth offering.

Kiltamond, under the racing banner of L. L. Kaplan, proved best of a poor lot that met in the mile and one-sixteenth of the closing number.

The Flack family of Rutherfordton, N. C., is notable for its long marriages. Mr. Joe F. Flack, who with his wife appears in the above drawing, is the youngest of five brothers. Not long ago he celebrated his fifty-fifth wedding anniversary, the fifth of the brothers to do so.

Two of Mr. Flack's brothers, J. M. Flack, of Chimney Rock, N. C., and George W. Flack, of Greer, S. C., are still alive. They are both past 80 years and are both able to be up and about. Mr. Joe Flack is 78 years old, his wife is 76, and both are still active.

Mr. Flack's three sisters established a record almost as noteworthy. Of the three who lived to maturity, two lived 50 years past their wedding day. One of them celebrated her golden wedding a few years ago. The other is a widow.

Of the eight children, six have celebrated their golden weddings.

Ethyl (grain) alcohol can be detected in minute quantities by its odor. It takes at least 24,000 times as much to react sufficiently on the sense of taste. If, then, the human senses of taste and smell be taken as standards, the odor of the alcohol is 24,000 times as strong as its taste.

Generally speaking, however, the sense of smell is much keener than that of taste. One might say, in the case of ethyl alcohol, the sense of smell is 24,000 times keener than the sense of taste.

with Bill Bennings.

Havre de Grace, April 24.

Dear Al:

The $7,500 Aberdeen Stakes, the first major test of the season for juveniles, is the midweek morsel offered turf fans hereabouts tomorrow. Bennings, Inc., has not failed to pick a stake winner since the Maryland sessions opened and tomorrow we are stringing along with a long shot. Up and Up goes for the marbles, onions, greenabck, mazuma or what have you. Today we were in fair form. Our first choice won the opener. We had the first two reversed in the second and were beaten a head in the third. Irene's Bob and Character were our winners. In the sixth, we lost by a length and a half, and in the seventh we lost the decision by a neck. BILL.

First race—Cheka appears to have found a field here that he can handle. This young fellow runs few poor races. Will like the off track and I see no reason for mistakes. Migrate appears to be formidable. Kurtsinger will handle this one. River Rose did not run her race the other day. Like Fake, she has a fighting chance.

Second race—St. Nick is a fit claimer now and that early speed may carry him so far in front that he will not be caught. Vishnu has been busy and is not to be counted out of the picture in a race of this kind. Time Enough for the show end.

Third race—Jack Low was away poorly in that last effort at Bowie. This fellow is far too promising to be kept away from brackets much longer. White Bird and Rhadamanthus for the other awards. Mud would move Black Falcon up considerably.

Fourth race—The Greentree Stable will not care if the track is heavy tomorrow. This outfit is pinning its hopes on Up and Up and I'm stringing along despite the appearance of many juveniles generally rated higher. This youngster demonstrated his ability over at Bowie on an off track. Given soft going, we may collect a heavy mutuel. Gold Buckle turned in a neat effort last week and will be pressing the top one. Black Gift and Little Lie are money possibilities.

Fifth race—Cavalcade goes postward for the first time this season and is reported to be a fit colt. He gets the distance he likes and if he is raced seriously, I'm looking no farther for the winner. Jabot and Boy Valet for the place and show.

Sixth race—Hokuao is as honest as they come. Appears to have the edge on the freshened Sea Fox.

Seventh race—Lawless Lady, Blue Foam and Repeal is the way I fancy them in the finale.

Weaver, Weiland To Oppose Today

Many of the cash customers have the idea that baseball is considered as "just a business" by the performers. Had they spent a few minutes in the Nats' locker room before yesterday's game, they surely would have changed their minds. Even the veteran, Walter Stewart, was thrilled. "Boy, this baseball game is full of thrills," he exclaimed. And then a few minutes later, he was given an extra thrill when he caught the ball tossed out by the President. The southpaw cooled off too much during the long delay to get a chance for even a greater thrill—possible victory.

The Red Sox are fast replacing the St. Louis Browns as a Nat "farm." In addition to Manager Harris, on the Beaneaters' pay roll are Coach Jack Onslow, First Baseman Joe Judge and Outfielder Carl Reynolds. And, Shortstop Bill Werber is a former Tech High star.

Bluege fumbled Morgan's hot roller in the first, but snatched up the ball in time to nip Werber on a force-play at second.

Morgan,w ho has improved 100 per cent as a fielder over the days when he was an Indian, pulled a Jesse James at Manush's expense ending the home first. He reached well over the foul-line tos nare a hard bounder with his gloved hand, robbing Heinie of at least a double.

The first moaning of the season here was heard when Umpire Brick Owens called Stewart out with the count 3 and 2 in the third, Berg on first, and none out.

The first-sackers had little fielding to do in the early innings. Morgan had his second putout ending the Nats' fourth and Kuhel did not get his second until the visiting fifth.

Russell had little trouble disposing of the first two batters who faced him starting the fifth, but a walk and four hits came before he could get the final out of the inning.

Today's game starts at 3:30, instead of at 3, as was the case yesterday and last season. Only Saturday and Sunday games get under way on the even hour.

In the sixth, Crowder pitched a slow one to Bishop. The latter counted the stitches on it, apparently discovered that they were all there, and then lashed out a single to center which propelled home the Sox' fourth run of the game.

Reynolds caught Gen. Crowder asleep in the seventh and beat out a bunt for his third hit of the game. Kuhel handled the tap but the General was counting up the crowd and failed to get to first in time to take the toss.

Walters' double in the eighth was the first extra-baser of the game, despite the fact that it was the eighteenth safety credited the two teams a that stage.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:35. Off at 3:36. Winner, A. Cremen's br. g. SINGLE A., nicely handled and kept in close pursuit of MARCH STEP, moved up strongly entering the home stretch, drew on even terms with the pacemaker inside the closing furlong, and under a strong hand ride, was up in the last few yards. MARCH STEP displayed nice speed while setting the pace, yawed around the way, and then continued courageously in the final issue. ELECTRIC GAFF worked his way up steadily and closed gamely. HAPPY LOPE went forwardly and had no mishaps. WANDREL could never better her position. THE HUN was outrun. DIJONETTE broke very slowly and was never a factor.

Stocks Yield As Selling Hits Other Markets

Many Leaders Join Losing Side; Sales Reach 1,276,200 Shares.

New York, April 24 (AP).—Heavy selling of silver and fresh weakness of grains contributed to further uncertainty in stock trading circles today and the trend was downward.

Many leaders were off fractions to a point net, particularly among industrials. Declines outnumbered advances about 2 to 1.

Stock transactions reached the moderate total of 1,276,000 shares. Speculative sentiment seemed confused, unwilling to venture very far on either side, although the familiar assortment of preferred issues and lower-priced specialties held a following on the advance.

Short Selling Timed.

Whatever short selling there was proved to be rather timid and traders for the most part had to be content with small swings.

Exceptions to this rule were provided by Twin City Rapid Transit issues preferred, Mallinson preferred, Servel, Real Silk, Manata Sugar preferred, Budd Manufacturing preferred and Devoe & Raynolds "A." Metals, steels, utilities and rails drifted off, while oils apparently paid some attention to talk of labor difficulties in their industry.

Liquidation of silver futures was well under way before the Treasury's list of holders became public. Speculative commitments were well lightened and the market closed around its lows.

Silver Stocks Soften.

Silver stock softened, their losses being about the largest of the day. Motors displayed some apprehension over their labor situation, though General Motors braced in the last hour. Auburn made another new low and Chrysler at the worst was off more than a point. Standard Oil of New Jersey, Socony Vacuum and Standard of California yielded approximately 1 each.

Several steel companies issued their first-quarter reports today, but interest, of course, centered in the showing of the industry's leading unit. United States Steel's profit from operations exceeded estimates, being larger by a million dollars than that for the final three months of 1933, whereas most of the guessers had looked for smaller earnings.

The total was the best since the second quarter of last year. Operations during April are sharply above those of the period covered by the report, and the finance committee had some cautiously optimistic remarks to make about the prospects of maintaining or increasing this month's rate over the balance of the second quarter.

Wool Market.

Boston, April 24 (A.P.).—(U. S. Department of Agriculture.)—The situation in Ohio and similar fleece wools, especially on the medium qualities, continued weak. Quotations were slightly easier on strictly combing 56s ⅝ blood Ohio wool at 36@36, grease basis, and on strictly combing 48s-50s ¼ blood at 35@37. The wool available on the lower side of the ranges being mostly new wool. Asking prices were mostly unchanged on the finer grades of fleeces. Very little volume of any grade of fleeces was moved.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Present Delay in the Modification of Security Act of 1933 Is Acting as a Needless and Inexcusable Brake Upon Business.

By Ralph West Robey.

By Ralph West Robey.

For weeks there have been recurrent reports that modifications were going to be made to the securities act—the "truth-in-securities" bill. At times, too, the reports have been reasonably specific as to what the changes would be, such as the statement that the liability provision would be limited so that an underwriter would be responsible for only his proportionate share of the total issue. The fact remains, nevertheless, that as yet nothing effective has been done toward modifying this act. Consequently, it continues to be a drag upon our economic system. There is no better way that the Administration could convince the public that it wants recovery than to hasten amendments to this measure.

Actually, of course, we can not tell how much recovery would result from such modifications. Some people believe that it would be great enough completely to change the business picture. Their argument is that not only is there an immense amount of new building that would take place but as well that a vast amount of money is needed simply for the rehabilitation of industry. Further, they emphasize that the total volume of issues would be greatly enhanced through the refunding of existing obligations. Such refunding would not be new capital, but in view of the present low rates of interest it would reduce the cost of production of the concerns involved and consequently would serve as a stimulant to business recovery.

Even Skeptics Grant Modification Would Help.

At the opposite extreme are those who hold that such an appraisal of the probable volume of borrowing that would take place is muc.. too favorable. Even this group, nevertheless, maintains that at least the whole tendency would be on the side of helping business. In other words, even those who are skeptical as to the size of the demand for new long-term capital grant that the present securities bill is acting as a brake on business recovery.

As a matter of fact it is difficult to see how one could reach any other conclusion. Every survey has shown, and, in so far as I know, every expression of opinion by a competent observer has been to the effect that the securities bill is preventing industry from getting the benefits of the present low rates of interest. Outstanding along this line was the recent symposium published in The Washington Post of the views of business leaders. There was not a single one in the scores of people included in that who does not think the securities bill is needlessly restrictive.

Present Bill Goes Beyond All Reason.

What this means, of course, is simply that those who drafted this bill went beyond all reason. Everyone is interested, and no one more so than reputable security underwriters, in the elimination of fraudulent issues and in those offerings which can result only in loss to investors. Everyone also is interested in having availible to purchasers all the information which is necessary as a basis for an appraisal of the security in question. Those who wrote the securities bill, however, while perhaps merely working to this ideal, overshot the mark so far that they have given us an unworkable measure.

This is so clear that there no longer can be any justification for further delay in driving through modifications to the measure. These modifications, too, must be genuine concessions. This means, by and large, that it will not be adequate merely to have them drafted by the individuals that drew up the original measure. They must be drawn by those who not only are competent, but as well have a sincere desire to rehabilitate the capital issues market.

Illinois Central Plans To Pay Notes June 1

New York, April 24 (AP). — Directors of the Illinois Central Railroad today announced a plan to meet the $20,000,000 maturity of 4½ per cent notes on June 1.

Subject to approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission, the road will offer holders 37½ per cent in cash and the balance in 6 per cent three-year debenture bonds.

Russia's Copper Yield Increased 50 Per Cent

Moscow, April 24 (U.P.).—Production of copper ore increased by 50 per cent during the first three months of 1934, as compared to the first three months of 1933, it was announced today.

Production of copper increased by 25 per cent.

Bond Market Closes Down; Federals Gain

Several U. S. Loans Make New Highs; Trading, $18,055,000.

New York, April 24 (AP).—U. S. Government securities held the center of interest in bond market dealings today, with an advance that carried several of these issues to high levels for the past year or longer.

While the Governments were regaining their popularity, however, the corporation groups were rather neglected and prices here displayed an irregular trend under the pressure of renewed profit-taking.

The trading volume expanded appreciably, transfers totaling $18,055,000, par value, against $14,934,000 yesterday. A turnover of some $6,300,000 in the Federal department, though, aided the aggregate. The average for 60 domestic corporate loans eased two-tenths of a point.

Stand Against Inflation.

Dealers attributed the movement toward Government bonds largely to administrative indications that currency inflation, at least for the moment, is not being considered in the recovery program.

For the first time in almost 2½ years the Treasury 3s reached par. Only during the first week after their issuance had this loan previously touched this figure. Treasury 3¼s were exceptionally active at a gain of 9-32ds of a point. Advances of as much or more were scattered throughout the list. Liberty bonds were firm but quiet.

The so-called "gilt-edge" corporate groups failed to follow the Federals, although they held their fluctuations to minor fractions.

On Gaining List.

Among the active moderate gainers in the utilities, industrials and rails were some loans of Bethlehem Steel, Beneficial Industrial, General Pacific, Columbia Gas, General Cable, New Haven, Norfolk & Southern, Pere Marquette, Sharon Steel Hoop, and Western Union.

Corporate casualties included bonds of Woolworth, Utilities Power & Light, Southern Railway, Frisco, Richfield Oil, Pennsylvania, Paramount, Northern Pacific, International Telephone, Illinois Central, Hudson Coal, Erie, Denver & Rio Grande, Chicago & North Western, St. Paul, Canadian Pacific, Baltimore & Ohio, American & Foreign Power and Alleghany Corporation.

Foreign obligations were dull and mixed. Bonds of Argentina rallied a point or more, as did some of the Germans.

Curb Trading Forced Into Mixed Trends

Specialties Move Higher; Others Sag; Sales, 246,000 Shares.

New York, April 24 (AP).—Confused movements occurred on the Curb Exchange today. A number of specialties moved higher, but metals and alcohols were lower. Utilities and oils were narrowly changed.

Dow Chemical, whose directors voted a 50 per cent stock dividend, closed nearly 5 points higher on a small transfer and Murphy Co. and Ford of Canada B gained around 4 in similar activity. Chicago Rivet & Machine and Cities Service preferred gained more than 2 each, while advances of a point were shown by Waco Aircraft and American Cyanamid "B."

Hiram Walker lost about 2 points and shares ending with decline of major fractions to around a point included Mead Johnson, Distillers Corporation-Seagrams, Swift Internacional, Pioneer Gold, Lake Shore, Gulf Oil and Novadel Agene. American Gas & Electric and Standard Oil of Indiana were steady.

Transfers approximated 246,000 compared with 219,000 yesterday.

Wall Street Briefs.

New York, April 24 (AP).—Freight loadings of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy last week totaled 19,899 cars, against 19,370 a week ago and 17,657 a year ago.

The Javan sugar crop, about to be harvested, is estimated at 595,000 tons, in contrast with 1,379,000 last year, according to advices received from Semarang by Lamborn & Co. The output is expected to be the smallest in 38 years.

Stockholders of Patino Mines & Enterprises, Consolidated, have approved purchase of 860,000 ordinary shares of British Tin Investment Corporation and acquisition of an option to buy additional stock.

Southern Pacific's freight loadings on its own lines last week totaled 21,371 cars, against 20,725 the previous week and 17,745 a year ago.

Today's gold statement of the New York Federal Reserve Bank shows receipts of $618,700 from India, of which $308,200 was reported for Monday.

Chicago — North Western Railway handled 23,839 cars of freight last week compared with 22,942 the previous week and 19,778 a year ago.

World Trade Developments

Little actual business change has occurred in France, but sentiment tends to become less optimistic.

The situation as a whole is unchanged in the Netherlands, though employment and a few industries are slightly stronger than last year.

Production is being maintained in Italy with unemployment reduced, but export developments are disappointing.

Czechoslovakia business continues to operate under difficulties, with production declining in some branches.

The gradual upturn persists in Austria, and coal production in January was the largest since early in 1929.

The new Greek budget provides for heavier expenditures and slightly larger receipts.

Yugoslav foreign trade during January had an important balance, owing primarily to heavy imports of raw materials.

Developments are favorable in Canada, with employment and wages advancing.

Gold mining remains active in the Union of South Africa, and the outlook is further improved by good crop prospects.

The economic trend in Austria continues upward, offset only by unsatisfactory butter, fruit and wheat prices.

Conditions are largely favorable in New Zealand, despite low prices for dairy products.

Japanese foreign trade during March increased over February.

The agricultural outlook in China is promising, with prospects of another good winter wheat crop.

The progress of United States legislation on the coconut oil excise tax has had a depressing effect on business in the Philippines.

Liquidation Pushes Cotton Prices Lower

May Closes at 11.16 as General Market Falls 20 to 21 Points.

New York, April 24 (AP).—Continued near-month liquidation and increased selling of later deliveries forced cotton prices into new low ground for the movement during today's trading.

July contracts sold off from 11.50 to 11.29 or 28 points net lower, and more than $2 a bale below the highs reached on the rally of late last week. That delivery closed at 11.32, with the general market closing barely steady at net declines of 20 to 31 points.

Early prices were slightly under the May liquidation in anticipation of possible notices tomorrow. There was also selling in later months on account of talk of diminishing prospects for silver legislation.

Becomes More Active.

Following a mild rally, liquidation became more active and general during the afternoon.

Stop orders were uncovered as prices broke into new low ground for the movement, with May selling off to 11.13, and December to 11.58, in the late trading, or 25 to 24 points net lower. Closing quotations were within 2 or 3 points of the lowest on most positions.

Reports of favorable weather for crop preparations in the South and continued quiet in the cotton goods market were considered influences on the decline, but the heavy May liquidation and the relative weakness of that position, which closed 16 points under July, compared with 10 points yesterday, were among the chief trading features.

The decline brought in some trade buying on scale down orders which included some price fixing for Far Eastern account.

Exports today 6,338 making 6,437,337 so far this season. Port receipts 17,375. U. S. port stocks 3,051,861.

Cottonseed Oil.

Bleachable cottonseed oil was easy today under increased liquidation and commission house selling, promoted by the decline in cotton, weakness in silver, and lower lard markets, as well as continued uncertainty regarding tax developments on imported vegetable oils. Final prices were 5 to 9 points net lower. Sales, 49 contracts. Bleachable spot, nominal; May closed, 5.15; July, 5.40 ; September, 5.62; October, 5.70.

30 Guests Accept Bankers Invitation

Thirty distinguished guests have accepted invitations to the annual preconvention dinner of the District of Columbia Bankers Association, to be held at 7:30 o'clock this evening at Columbia Country Club. Thomas J. Groom, vice president, Bank of Commerce & Savings, who is general chairman of the convention next month, will preside.

Speakers scheduled are Roger J. Whiteford, general counsel, Hamilton National Bank; Maurice D. Rosenberg, president, Bank of Commerce & Savings, and Robert V. Fleming, president, Riggs National Bank. The latter two are both past presidents of the association and Mr. Whiteford has attended all of its previous conventions. The toastmaster will be Frank J. Hogan, general counsel of the association.

Nearly 200 reservations have been sent to Karl W. Corby, of W. B. Hibbs & Co., who is in charge of the dinner. He announces 40 entries in the golf tournament for the Robert V. Fleming Cup, which will be played during the afternoon. The cup and other prizes will be awarded during the evening.

Trade Trends.

(Associated Press.)

Machinery—April sales of machinery and machine tools seem to be running in smaller volume than March, says American Machinist. Distributors from nearly all the important industrial centers "attribute the decline to labor troubles and consequent uncertainty," the publication asserts.

Copper—Signing of the code has had no market effect as yet. Some producers are finding demand light after the recent buying flurry which apparently was in expectation of higher prices.

Chemicals—Textile manufacturers are buying chlorine in substantial volume. Chromic acid and nickel salts are being taken by the plating trade to meet the requirements of the automobile industry.

Silk fabrics—Inquiry for prints is improving, some textile brokers report. Prices, however, have recently been inclined to weaken.

Floor coverings—A leading producer of felt base merchandise is advancing prices 6 to 7 per cent to wholesale distributors, effective May 31. No action is being taken on linoleum at this time.

Steel Ingot Production.

New York, April 24 (AP).—Current steel ingot production in the United States was estimated at 54 per cent of capacity by the American Iron & Steel Institute today, as compared to 50.3 per cent a week ago. The rate is the highest since last August.

Sugar Shipments Gain.

New York, April 24 (AP).—Puerto Rico's raw sugar shipments to the United States totaled 335,290 short tons from January 1 to April 21, showing a gain over last year of 20.2 per cent.

Metal Market Continues at Steady Pace

Copper Selling Moderates; Lead Is Firm; Zinc Turns Easier.

New York, April 24.—Considering the large volume of business that was placed in major nonferrous metals in the preceding week, Metal & Mineral Markets said. The quiet that prevailed throughout the last seven days occasioned no great concern among producers.

Operators seem satisfied that the movement of finished products is increasing. Fabricators of copper have booked a substantial tonnage of their products so far this month and specifications are still coming through at a good rate.

Prices for copper and lead were easily maintained. Zinc prices eased moderately. Tin was featureless. Silver declined more than 1 cent per ounce on liquidation by speculators, who had counted on additional legislation in Washington at this session of Congress.

Copper Selling Moderates.

Copper sales during the last seven days totaled 3,100 tons, and an 8½-cent delivered, Connecticut, price basis was quoted in all directions throughout the week. The falling off in consumer interest was attributed largely to the delay in the signing of the code of fair practice for the industry.

Sales abroad also fell off sharply last week, the recent heavy buying in those markets presumably having satisfied immediate requirements for the metal.

Pending signing of the code, or some other incentive, little improvement in European buying is expected to develop. Prices during the week ranged from 8.25 cents to 8.50 cents, c. i. f.

Lead Quiet but Firm.

Lead business almost vanished last week, buyers, after having purchased heavily in the three preceding weeks, showing no desire to stock up further at the recent advance in prices.

With the movement of lead into consumptive channels, and production due to come down, producers regard the situation as firm. Quotations were maintained at 4.25 cents, New York.

Lead sold so far this month for April shipments to consumers totals around 29,000 tons, against sales of 28,400 tons for delivery in March. May shipment lead sold to date totals slightly more than 14,000 tons.

Zinc at 4.35 Cents, St. Louis.

Consumer interest in zinc last week, as in the instance of other nonferrous metals, was materially less than that prevailing a week earlier.

This condition led to weakness in the price structure of zinc, the metal selling in fair tonnage for early delivery on the basis of 4.35 cents, St. Louis.

Daily Oil Yield Is Increased 4,987 Barrels

Tulsa, Okla., April 24 (AP).—Crude oil production of the United States increased 4,987 barrels in daily average last week, from 2,472,906 to 2,477,893 barrels, the Oil and Gas Journal says.

A sharp increase in east Texas production, accounting for most of Texas' rise from 1,008,879 to 1,039,549 barrels daily, was the deciding factor in the week's statistics. Most other areas cut production.

East Texas produced 504,310 barrels daily, as compared with a previous average of 482,125 barrels.

In Oklahoma there was a decrease from 522,585 to 508,220 barrels, and California registered a drop from 491,750 to 485,000 barrels. In Kansas a decrease from 131,585 to 126,880 barrels was reported; Eastern fields, including Michigan, had an increase from 127,122 to 128,904 barrels; the Rocky Mountain area was up 390 barrels at 84,400.

U. S. Grain Exports Rise During Week

(Associated Press.)

Grain exports from the United States last week amounted to 1,877,000 bushels against 1,422,000 bushels the previous week and 126,000 bushels in the corresponding week last year.

Commerce Department figures yesterday gave the following comparisons between last week's exports and those of the week before: wheat, 1,861,000, against 1,245,000; rye, none, against 120,000 bushels; corn, 16,000, against 36,000; barley, none, against 41,000. There were no exports of oats in either week.

Canadian grain exported last week from United States ports amounted to 672,000 bushels, against 850,000 the week before, while last week's exports of North American wheat flour were 63,000 barrels, against 48,000 the previous week.

Belle Haven's Golf Opens Today

Two-Thirds of Field of 150 to Qualify in Initial Tourney Round.

THE stage is all set today for the District's first invitation golf tournament of the season at Belle Haven Country Club, a nine-hole course located in Alexandria. More than 150 golfers from every club in this section and a few from Virginia are entered for the 18-hole qualifying round, although only two-thirds of the field will compete today. As is customary in invitation tournaments here, the medal round is played over a two-day period, but most of the contestants have asked for playing times today.

To C. C. Brown and Charlie Rollins, of Belle Haven, and C. D. Williams, of Indian Spring, will go the honor of teeing off first. They will tee off at 7:30. Frank Baggett, young Beaver Dam golfer, who scored an 80 yesterday, is paired with Ted Rutley and T. W. Mody at 9:55. An interesting threesome will be that composed of Tommy Webb, jr., outstanding Washington golf and Country Club player; Ralph Fowler and Dr. Larry Otell, who will play at 2:10. Parker Nolan, of Indian Spring finalist in the 1933 Manor invitation, is paired with Billy Jones and C. H. Severance at 2:20. John Shorey, of Kenwood, former "boy wonder" of golf, will tee off with Maury Fitzgerald and Everett Johnson at 1:50.

Play Tomorrow.

Harry B. Pitt, of Manor, big favorite, who saw his practice round yesterday washed out by rain; Roger Peacock and Hickman Greene, will not play until tomorrow afternoon. John Connelly, public links star, went around in 82 blows and amazed his friends by driving the 354-yard twefth hole.

The course, well groomed for the occasion, has a 36—36—72 par, and measures 6,391 yards. Deceptive and lightning-fast greens promise to give golf stars plenty of trouble in their first big tournament of the year.

Earl McAleer, left-handed star, entered yesterday, and will pair with W. J. Carver, of Manor, and W. Krause, of Belle Haven, at 9:30 Thursday. B. P. Garnett, of Washington, and C. York, of Argyle, were given 9 a. m. as a starting time tomorrow. C. S. Runswick, of Indian Spring, plays at 12:05 today.

Notes of Opener

rushed out with the diamond hanky and dried the face of the ball park for the resumption of the game.

Someone exploded a firecracker in the visitors' locker room, and a cop rushed out crying, "They've finally got Dillinger!" One Red Sox jokester made a beard out of some cotton batting and amused the boys no end with a Kentucky Kuhnel accent.

Postmaster General Farley tried to outwait the rain in the locker room, but finally decided to call it no contest. Then he couldn't find his automobile.

The tarpaulin-rollers received as big a hand as Mussolini at an Italian field day when they commenced folding up the big canvas. When a flock of white-coated reinforcements came galloping up, the 15,000 fans who had remained through the downpour went into ecstasies. All that was needed to give the scene a good old nickelodeon flavor was for the Army Band to burst into "The Stars and Stripes Forever."

Joe Judge spiked his old pal Heinie Manush, but not on the diamond. As Heinie started down the steps toward the dugout, Judge jumped on his back to ride piggy-back onto the field. His spikes inadvertently dug into Manush's right shoe, tearing a large chunk of leather out of it. Heinie, of course, limped painfully back to his locker, moaning that he had been seriously injured, much to Joe's discomfiture. But, all was serene when he came tearing out, sans limp, in a few minutes.

The man with the bell, who kept things tingling during the world series, was back again, ringing away like mad every time the Nats made a good play. He changed his allegiance to the Sox in the fifth inning as Max Bishop chalked up the first run for the Beantowners.

Roy Johnson fouled off Berg's chest protector into Umpire Geisel's mask in the fifth. Geisel had to hold up the game while he borrowed a bat to pound out the kinks.

Geisel again held up the game in the sixth inning while a man with a little bucket whitewashed home plate. But that didn't prevent the Sox from whitewashing the Nats.

Dave Harris' vaunted .400 bat went into reverse when he was shot in as a pinch hitter in the sixth with the bases full. Instead of batting .400 the Sheriff popped a high fly for an average of .004—or less.

Clark Griffith crossed up the newspaper boys during the rain intermission. Looking for Elmer Klumpp, he ran around asking "Where's Elmer at?" thereby ruining some kind of a beautiful crack that might have been made.

Hampden Sydney Wins As Hurler Gives 2 Hits

Hampden Sydney, Va., April 24 (AP).—Lefty Douglas blanked the Bridgewater Eagles with two hits today to gain a 6-to-0 victory for Hampden Sydney in the opener of their two-game series. Douglas was in danger only once as ten men fanned and only one reached third base.

The game, delayed fifteen minutes by rain, was marked by sparkling plays, a wet field and fast base running. Huffman, of Bridgewater, was the fielding star of the game, collecting seven put outs in centerfield.

Bistate Loop Admits Two New Clubs for '34

Martinsville, Va., April 24 (Spl.).—Organization plans for the operation of the Bistate Baseball League, Class D circuit, were completed at a meeting of league directors here. Two new clubs were admitted to the circuit, Leaksville-Spray-Draper and Mounty Airy, N. C., making formal application for membership. With Martinsville, Danville, Fieldale and Mayodan the other clubs already in, the six-club compact loop is completed.

Cincinnati, National League club, has agreed to back the Mounty Airy club as a farm, St. Louis Cardinals are backing Martinsville, Albany, Internationals, has a working agreement with Danville, while Detroit will aid the Mayodan club. Fieldale and Leaksville-Spray-Draper, will work independently. The playing season opens May 5 and closes Labor Day.

RichmondNine Will Oppose Maryland

Terps Send Ruble to Slab in Effort to Avenge 10-2 Beating.

RICHMOND'S baseball team, which is cutting a wide swath in collegiate circles this spring, invades College Park this afternoon for a tussle with Maryland. It will be their second meeting. Richmond ran roughshod over the Terps several weeks ago and won, 10-2.

Ralph Ruble, who leads Southern Conference slabmen with three victories and no defeats, probably will be called upon to quell the Southerners' devastating batting attack. Steve Physioc and Specs Medler will be on the premises if Ruble needs help, but he's hardly likely to.

In three games Ruble granted only 14 hits, struck out 22, and compiled a healthy batting average that adds up to .367. His victims were Washington and Lee and Virginia, which he set down twice. Bucky Buscher will be the head man in Ruble's supporting cast. His stick average thus far is .333.

Hoya Netmen Active.

The only other contest scheduled today involves Georgetown's tennis team, which will play host to Wake Forest at the Hilltop. The Hoyas defeated Temple in their initial match of the season, but bowed to Navy last Saturday at Annapolis.

A couple of ball games and a tennis match are scheduled tomorrow. Georgetown entertains Temple's diamonders, while George Washington's nine goes to Ashland, Va., for a game with Randolph-Macon. The Colonial net team will play Wake Forest, while Georgetown, Maryland and Catholic U. are to compete in the Penn Relays.

6-Run Tiger Rally Downs White Sox

Marberry Goes Route to Triumph, 7 to 3.

Detroit, April 24 (AP)—Detroit put on a six-hit, six-run rally in the sixth inning here today, and trimmed Chicago's White Sox, 7 to 3, in the first home field appearance of the revamped Tigers.

The veteran Fred Marberry, who won his opening game against the Sox in Chicago a week ago, went the full route for the Tigers today, giving up only nine scattered hits, including a triple by Luke Appling and a double by Henry "Zeke" Bonura, the flashy rookie from Texas.

A throng of 24,000 customers sat through a cold afternoon in Navin Field to welcome the Tigers home with all the usual field ceremonies of an opening day.

Davis Defeats Meola In Fight at Frederick

Frederick, Md., April 24 (Spl.).—Benny Davis, Washington, clever young lightweight, won the decision over Angelo Meola, Baltimore, in six rounds before a large crowd at Grove's Arena here.

K. O. Matthews, Waynesboro, knocked out Ted Goodhart, in the fifth of a six-round go. Billy Bullock, Greenville, S. C., won from Russ Driscoll, Baltimore, in four rounds. Mike Grove's string of one-round knockouts came to an end, but he won the decision from Benny Kessler, Baltimore, in four rounds. Young Wright, local product, knocked out K. O. Wilson, Waynesboro, Pa., in the first of a three-round go. The last event, a wrestling bout between Swede Garbo, Baltimore, 198 pounds, and Rusty Austin, 187, Dallas, Tex., resulted in a draw.

Chestertown to Hold Dog Show on May 4

Chestertown, Md., April 24 (Spl.).—Canine fanciers from six parts of Maryland, as well as from some nearby States, will come here with their entries for the first annual Kent County dog show to be staged in the State Armory on May 4.

Entries have been received from as far north as Rye, N. Y., and some from Philadelphia and surrounding suburban centers, Baltimore, Washington and Wilmington.

Giants Score, Deal Phillies 7th Loss

Schumacher and Ott Pound Two Homers Apiece in 11-7 Victory.

PHILADELPHIA, April 24 (AP).—The champion New York Giants found the range of Philadelphia's pitchers and fences today and slugged out a 11-to-7 victory in the Phils' first home game of the season. Hal Schumacher, who did most of the pitching for the Giants, and Mel Ott walloped two home runs apiece to account for eight Giant tallies.

One of the smallest opening day crowds in recent years, only about 7,500, was in the stands when Mayor J. Hampton Moore threw out the first ball. The gathering saw the Phils defeated for the seventh time in succession.

Replaced by Hubbell.

Braced by his two homers, one with one mate on base and another with two on, Schumacher kept the Phils in check until the eighth, when he weakened slightly and Carl Hubbell replaced him. Manager Jimmy Wilson did most of the stickwork for the Phils, hammering a four-bagger with two aboard in the fourth.

Braves Beat Dodgers In Home Opener, 5 to 3

Boston, April 24 (AP).—Paced by Wally Berger's second homer, and Fred Frankhouse's triple, which started the winning rally, the Braves opened their home season by defeating the Brooklyn Dodgers, 5 to 3, today before 10,000 spectators.

The Braves went to work early on Walter Beck, Brooklyn right-hander, and completed their scoring before he gave way to Leslie Munns in the fifth. Berger's homer came in the third for the second run. After two were out in the fourth, Frankhouse clouted a triple with Hogan on base to touch off a three-run rally.

Roosevelt Departs Before Nats Lose

the focal point of 25,000 pairs of eyes.

Secret Service Men.

Alert figures spring up from nowhere. Even among the reporters and photographers new faces appear. How many of them are Secret Service men no one knows, but it is significant that a suspicious bulge in the pockets is brushed many times by these quiet figures. Word is circulated among the minions of the news that police cards must be conspicuously displayed. Before long those without them are shooed away.

Up in the stands, around the Presidential box, all tickets are being examined carefully and the crowd gradually is being weeded out.

Fifteen minutes to game time. A sleek, shiny touring car pokes its nose around the corner and comes to a gentle halt beside the ramp. Two gold-braided men of the military jump out and stand at attention while the President doffs a gray fedora and smiles acknowledgement of a thunderous vocal display. The policemen and other uniformed men, including two lines of ball players, stand at attention. Even the newsmen take off their hats.

Off the Record.

Once the President is in his seat, all stand at attention while the band blares forth the National Anthem. The President is seated and the photographers start to click their cameras, the newsreel men to crank their picture boxes. The Chief Executive engages in a pleasantry with a passing citizen. It is picked up by a talking movie microphone placed inconspicuously in front of the box. Bernard Baruch, who is seated next to him, whispers something in his ear. The microphone undoubtedly picks up that, too. Maybe they are whispering about a great state secret. Maybe their don't know the microphone is there.

The Army Band leads a parade of both teams to the centerfield flagpole for the customary performance. The newsmen are instructed to squat way down so the President can see the fun. Every one rises but the President and Baruch as Vice President Garner and an Indian chief start to tug the flag slowly up the pole. Big Jim Farley, Postmaster General, and boss man of the Democratic Party, fidgets restlessly and sits down before the ceremony is completed. Marvin McIntyre, another member of the party simply smiles.

Greets Both Managers.

Five minutes to game time. The Washington team lines up in front of the President and Joe Cronin and Bucky Harris go to the box for the usual handshakes. A new ball is passed up and the Nats, to a man, assume a look as serious as though they were running under a high fly which had to be caught to forestall loss of a world series. Even cocky Dave Harris is taking no chances. He is wearing a catcher's mitt.

The President poises the ball and holds it aloft while the photographers snap and snap and cry piteously, "Hold it just a minute, Mr. President."

"I'm not so good at this," smiles the President. "Last year I almost killed a photographer."

All within earshot laugh and the ball comes bobbling out into a mad scramble of players. Walter Stewart leaps forward in the air and spears it with a one-handed catch that would have done credit to any outfielder.

Consults Score Card.

Game time. Franklin Delano Roosevelt, baseball fan, consults his scorecard frequently as the visiting Red Sox go down in rapid-fire order. He consults that scorecard frequently. Even a baseball-minded President can not keep up with the players without a scorecard.

The fourth inning storm clouds gather and Col. Starling fusses np to ask the President something. The President shakes his head in negation. Max Bishop swings so hard he is almost thrown off balance. Baseball Fan Roosevelt evinces a lively interest. A few drops of rain fall. Col. Starling again leans close to the President to ask him something. Again he shakes his head in negation.

A downpour arrives simultaneously with a high wind. An overcoat is whisked around President Roosevelt, and an announcement is made over the loudspeaker for all to remain seated until the Chief Executive has left. A White House car is backed close to the box and the President is whisked quickly away. Fifteen thousand other baseball fans can stay to see the finish of the ball game in the rain, but not Baseball Fan Franklin Delano Roosevelt. Because he happens to be President of these United States.

The car bearing him away from the stadium is a limousine, completely inclosed from the rain, even though he arrived in an open car. That's Secret Service.

District Fight Bill Signed by President

"It's a Grand Bill," Says Roosevelt; Commission to Be Named Soon.

BY A FEW deft strokes of the pen, President Franklin D. Roosevelt yesterday attached his signature to the District boxing bill legalizing professional and amateur fighting here.

The realization of a long-cherished dream of prominent Washington sportsmen, and the end of a battle for passage of the bill waged by Senator David Walsh, of Massachusetts; Representative Fred A. Hartley, jr., of New Jersey, and Representative Loring M. Black, jr., of New York, came shortly after 12 o'clock noon. Walsh, Black and Hartley witnessed the signing.

President Roosevelt's remark as he guided the pen to make the measure official was "It's a grand bill."

While the President was applying the finishing touches to the bill in his office, outside, composed and confident, sat James Sullivan, chairman of the District A. A. U. boxing committee, and Edward Rosenbloom, vice president of the District A. A. U. They arrived too late to witness the ceremonies.

Rosenbloom has been prominently mentioned as one of the commissioners. The appointment of a commissioner by the District Commissioners will be the next stop in the way of regular boxing. Three members, one of which must come from the police force, will be named. Following the appointment the commission will award licenses to promoters, managers and fighters. A set of regulations governing admission and the distance of bouts also will be drawn up.

Under the new law the boxing commission does not take any percentage of the gate receipts. Only from license fees will the commission receive its income.

Commissioner George E. Allen already has indicated that a boxing commission would be appointed within a week or ten days. Meanwhile all eyes will be riveted on Griffith Stadium, where Joe Turner is expected to be the promoter.

Groff, District Youth, Leads Penn Swimmers

Groff is a senior and a letter-man in football, baseball, basket ball and swimming. He formerly starred in athletics at Woodward Prep here.
